Noose tightens on Garcia

General's silence unravels as solons press probe

By Carlito Pablo and Fe Zamora

IN THE end, the right against self-incrimination that Maj. Gen. Carlos Garcia had so passionately invoked provided him no refuge.

Testifying yesterday at the resumption of House hearings on military corruption, the suspended former Armed Forces comptroller was trapped into admitting that he had at least $100,000 that his two sons attempted to bring undeclared into the United States in December 2003.

The money ended up being confiscated by US customs authorities.

Pressing Garcia with a series of seemingly innocent questions, House defense committee chair Rep. Roilo Golez (Kampi, Parañaque) also got him to admit the contents of a letter dated Jan. 12, 2004 that the general sent to the US Fines, Penalties and Forfeiture Office using his official AFP stationery.

In the letter, Garcia pleaded for "kind understanding and a favorable disposition on the case of my sons."

Garcia made the series of admissions on the second day of his testimony at the joint hearings by the House committees on national defense and on banks on graft and corruption in the AFP.

At Monday's hearing, Garcia invoked his right to remain silent at least 20 times, triggering the suspicion that he was protecting other officers.

Three former AFP chiefs of staff rebuffed a request by Rep. Imee Marcos (KBL, Ilocos Norte) for them to submit to the hearing the records of their deposits and transactions with the Armed Forces and

THE COMMANDER of government forces that quelled the Magdalio coup attempt last year has been named the next chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Lt. Gen. Efren Abu is set to replace AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya, who is due to retire on Oct. 29 when he reaches the mandatory retirement age of 56.

Abu, the commanding general of the Army, will assume the top post in the 117,000-strong AFP as the military establishment is being hounded by controversy after

THE MAN in the hot seat has been transformed from a lamb into a tiger, two of Maj. Gen. Carlos Garcia's classmates at the Philippine Military Academy said yesterday.

Garcia's two "misrahi" in PMA Class of 1971, now both ranking officials of the Philippine National Police, noted the apparently startling transformation on Monday, the first time the general showed up at the House inquiry into alleged corruption in the Armed Forces.

"He has really changed," said one.

"He's no longer the silent, soft-spoken guy we'd always known him to be since our days at the academy," said the other.

Garcia's aide with P50M in assets sacked

CEBU CITY—An Army colonel accused of amassing P50 million worth of assets has gone the way of his former boss, Maj. Gen. Carlos Garcia.

Col. George Rabusa has been removed as operations officer of the Armed Forces' Central Command based in Cebu City in the wake of an investigation of alleged corruption in the Armed Forces, the military said yesterday.

Rabusa was the budget division chief of Garcia when the two-star general headed the Office of the AFP Comptroller. Garcia, suspended without pay and restricted to his quarters, is also facing investigation over allegations of unexplained wealth.

Rabusa is alleged to have acquired unexplained wealth worth P50 million consisting of pieces of real estate, vehicles and cash deposits. As a colonel, he has a gross income of P26,639.88 a month.

WIGGLING to the Wiggles, a famous Australian children's band, which happens to be the favorite of formerly conjoined twins Clarence and Carl Aguirre.

MONTEFIORE MEDICAL CENTER

NEW YORK—A doctor's appointment turned into a treat when formerly conjoined twins Carl and Clarence Aguirre were visited by their favorite band The Wiggles.

The twins' mother Arlene Aguirre brought the boys to the Children's Hospital at Montefiore (CHAM) Medical Center on Friday for a series of appointments as preparations continued for their next reconstructive surgery with plastic surgeon Dr. David Stassenberg.

The Wiggles, if you didn't know, is a famous Australian children's band, having sold more than 9 million home videos worldwide (6 million in the United States alone).

Three-year-old kids love them for their simple, catchy songs usually about food and animals.

Like the Teletubbies, the four members wear different colored shirts and sport varying personalities: Blue-man Anthony likes to eat, yellow-guy Greg performs magic, red-chap Murray makes faces and purple-dude Jeff takes naps.

The Wiggles gave a 20-minute show which was much appreciated by the 2-year-old twins, as well as the other young patients in the hospital. The group even toured four hospital floors to visit patients who were unable to attend their show.

The Australian band had CHAM patients dancing with their renditions of "Point Your Finger and Do The Twist," "Hot Potato," AUSSIE/A20

Ramiscal faces charges

First of 148 graft raps filed in Sandiganbayan

By Armand N. Nocum

THE OFFICE of the Ombudsman yesterday started filing charges against retired Brig. Gen. Jose S. Ramiscal in connection with the P195.86-million real estate scam involving funds of the Armed Forces of the Philippines Retirement and Separation Benefits Systems (AFPS-RSBS).

Ramiscal, a former RSBS president, and three other RSBS officials were charged before the Sandiganbayan anti-graft court with 10 of 148 counts of estafa through falsification of public documents.

Also charged with estafa through falsification of public documents and for violation of the Anti-Graft and Corrupt Practices Act were RSBS executives lawyers Meinrado Enrique and Manuel Satuito and Capt. Perfecto Quilicot.

The four were accused of overpricing the purchase of 148 lots by the RSBS in 1996.

The respondents not only allegedly failed to secure the RSBS funds, they also allegedly converted them for their own use, said the complaint filed by Ombudsman graft investigators and prosecutors Wendel E. Barreras-Sulit, John Turalba and Warlito Galisanao.

Ramiscal and the three officials violated the trust of the soldiers who contributed to the fund, it said.

"By its very nature, the system's funds are trust funds. Therefore, it was incumbent upon Ramiscal and other responsible officials to exercise utmost prudence and use the system's funds only in a conservative, secure manner in order to protect the soldiers' money," the Ombudsman said, quoting a report by a Senate panel that first investigated the matter in 1999.

Employing alleged "devious" gimmick, the four RSBS officials reportedly bought 148 parcels of land in Calamba, Laguna; Tanauan, Batangas, and Iloilo City in 1996.

The RSBS then drafted two deeds of sale: the first, a "unilateral deed of sale" signed only by the landowners and priced at P28,226,090; and, second, a "bilateral deed of sale" signed by the landowners and the RSBS represented by Ramiscal with a declared purchase price of P195,852,513.

The unilateral deed of sale was then used to register the property at the Register of Deeds in Tanauan, Batangas. The document was also used as the basis for the payment of the capital gains tax and transfer tax by the RSBS to the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The bilateral deed of sale was not made public and were kept in the files of the RSBS. They were later used by Ramiscal's group to justify the payment of P195 million to the landowners.

Investigators noted that while official stamps and annotations appeared on the unilateral deed of sale, the same marks were totally absent from the other document.

What was anomalous was the disparity of the purchase price in the two deeds of sale which clearly showed the malicious design of the respondents, the Ombudsman said.

Ramiscal and the other RSBS officials are also facing several graft charges before the Sandiganbayan, one of which involved the sale of a P341.3-million property in Calamba, Laguna, which was found to have been overpriced by P91 million.

Ramiscal was ordered arrested by the Sandiganbayan in 2000, but is out on P500,000 bail.

He is also accused of shortchanging tax payments for the purchase of a P37-million parcel of land in Batangas.

None of the respondents were available for comment.

GMA to lead Leyte Gulf rites today

PALO, Leyte—President Macapagal-Arroyo is expected to hark back to the idealized days of Philippine-American relations when she comes to commemorate the epic World War II Allied landings here 60 years ago that heralded the final collapse of the Japanese Occupation of the Philippines.

Around 1,000 aging survivors of that campaign will gather here for today's anniversary ceremony at the MacArthur Landing Memorial Park, where gold-painted statues of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and those who came ashore with him stand on a pool of water overlooking Leyte Gulf, a triumphant remainder of the last major invasion and sea battle of World War II.

The event also commemorates the special ties between the Philippines and the United States, a relationship that was recently frayed by the withdrawal of the Philippines' token contingent in Iraq to save the life of a Filipino hostage.

US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone will lead some 70 foreign dignitaries who are expected to converge here for the commemoration.

Two US battleships from Okinawa have arrived and the US soldiers on board are expected to join today's Liberation Parade.

Largely forgotten in the annals of popular military history, the Leyte landings that began on Oct. 20, 1944, saw around 160,000 US-led troops storm the beaches of the Leyte Gulf in the eastern corner of the Philippines.

Estimates of casualties varied, but the scale of the Japanese rout was vast. Japan recorded around 47,000 casualties compared to 3,500 Allied dead and 12,000 wounded.

The first landing site, code-named Red Beach, saw the triumphant return to Philippine soil of MacArthur, the commander of the US Armed Forces, who waded ashore and declared in a radio address to the nation: "People of the Philippines, I have returned!"

'Why didn't cops chase Martinez killers?'

By Christian V. Esguerra and Leila B. Salaverria

IN THE wake of the killing of Supt. Manolo Martinez in front of the Sta. Mesa police station he commanded one question begged to be asked and this was posed by Director Avelino Razon, National Capital Region Police Office chief.

Why did no one from the police station go after the assailants who pumped six bullets into Martinez as he got off his SUV?

Instead, the assailants and their lookouts managed to escape after commanding a passing jeepney.

Razon, however, told the INQUIRER, "It's still being investigated. In the meantime, we won't sack anybody."

Razon said he also formed a task force composed of members of the NCRPO's Regional Intelligence and Investigation Division to assist the Western Police District in its investigation.

Philippine National Police Director General Edgar Aglipay placed the 115,000-strong force on full alert and ordered the deployment of more officers to checkpoints around Metro Manila and the provinces.

So far, Razon said, the authorities were looking into the angles that Martinez may have been killed by communist hit men or by enemies in the police force.

"We're not discounting anything," he said.

Martinez's wife Lucila expressed doubt his killers belonged to a rebel group, saying the firearms the assailants used indicated they may have been lawmen.

"They had an M-16, a .45 and a grenade. Who else has access to those but members of the police or the military?" Lucila Martinez said in an interview yesterday.

She said, however, that she was not aware of any enemies her husband may have had in the police force, saying only that jealousy among colleagues may have been the motive.

She said she had heard that her husband, a veteran Manila policeman, was one of the candidates to replace WPD director Chief Supt. Pedro Bulaong when the latter is promoted.

"If he had an enemy, he would not have been driving himself," she said.

A Double Take on SKINCARE

What makes a successful center? What makes clients come again and again for their facial treatments? I believe no one can best answer these questions than the skincare center which has been around for more than two decades already -- Facial Care Centre.

Alvee Crawley, manager of Facial Care Centre Makati says, "The success of our center lies in state-of-the-art treatments, excellent service, and a continuous acquisition and introduction of the latest skincare breakthroughs. In fact, this year alone, we have introduced two new treatments which men and women will surely love."

Indeed, the new treatments are very promising. First is the LightCure Acne Therapy -- the latest technology for the treatment of acne or pimples. We've asked Dr. Isabellita Joya, Facial Care Centre's resident dermatologist, what the treatment is all about and how it works.

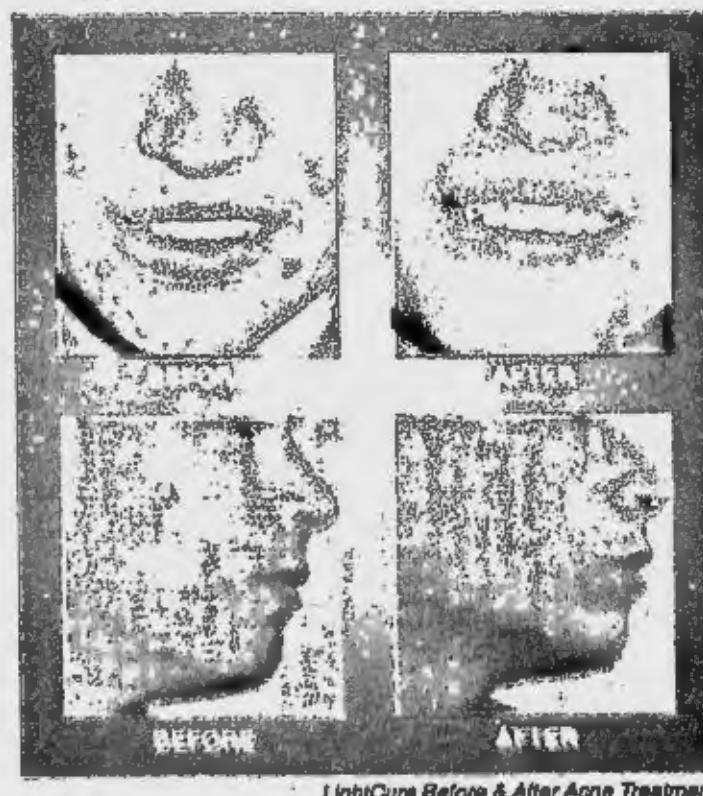

Alvee Crawley

LightCure Acne Therapy is a treatment for all types of acne (pimples) for all ages," says Dr. Joya. "It uses the emission of exact wavelengths of light at the most effective intensity for maximum photo-destruction of acne bacteria and reduction of skin inflammation. So there's no need to prick, take pills or have the injections just to treat acne."

"A special kind of bacteria called propionibacterium acnes (p. acnes) is responsible for the inflammation of acne lesions. LightCure works by using high-intensity blue-violet light that activates photosensitizers called porphyrins, produced by these bacteria in the sebaceous glands. When porphyrins are activated by the high-intensity of light, they start a chemical reaction that produces peroxides, which in turn, selectively destroys the p. acnes bacteria, without harming surrounding tissues," she further explains.

LightCure Treatment

LightCure Before & After Acne Treatment

Asked how safe the treatment is, Dr. Joya confidently says, "LightCure is among the safest skin treatments available because the light emitted is UV-free, natural and not harmful at all. It has no side effects, no risks of burns or pigmentation changes, and is FDA-approved."

We've also learned that compared to other treatments, LightCure is way ahead. It produces results up to 3 times faster than any other acne treatment -- without disruption to your lifestyle. An additional benefit, LightCure Acne Therapy can treat acne on any part of your body and has long-lasting preventive effect.

Already proven effective by Facial Care Centre's clients, LightCure Acne Therapy is indeed the real solution to your persistent acne problems.

The other treatment recently introduced by Facial Care Centre is the Vita Spa Facial Treatment. This time, Alvee Crawley is the one who talked to us about this new treatment.

"Vita Spa is an experience for the senses...the ultimate indulgence," according to Alvee. "As the name implies, it makes use of essential vitamins that are really good for your skin. Vita Spa is composed of 2 treatments: Vita A.C.E. and Vita Velvet, which give you the relaxing feeling of a spa treatment."

"Vita A.C.E. is a cooling, refreshing treatment that utilizes the benefits of vitamins A, C, and E in highly concentrated form, to enhance the skin's resistance to various elements and replenish vital moisture that leaves your skin with a wonderful glow."

"Vita Velvet, on the other hand, is a luxurious treatment that combines the benefits of an age-defying facial and a rejuvenating massage. It deep-cleanses, energizes and reduces visible aging signs, reviving the elasticity and suppleness of your skin through a pampering massage that ensures its benefits and has a relaxing effect on your senses. Vita Velvet is definitely an indulgence that's beyond spa."

An instant favorite of Facial Care Centre clients, everyone really appreciates the many benefits they get from Vita Spa.

One very satisfied client, model Patty Betita, has this to say, "I love it! It's very refreshing...the massage was so relaxing...and the mask was my favorite part because it was so cold and soothing. I actually slept during the treatment. Afterwards, my skin felt so fresh and smooth like a baby's skin. It really felt so good, I told myself, I really love this treatment."

RX93.1 disc jockey Delamar adds, "I like it! It's cold and relaxing and it seems that the effect lasts longer on me. It's been exactly one week since I tried the treatment and my skin still feels just as smooth as when I had it seven days ago. I think the name Vita Velvet sums up what the treatment promises -- a vibrant, lively smoothness!"

Makeup artist Barbi Chan couldn't agree more, "It's very, very relaxing...and I love the smell. It's very citrusy. I guess it's the whole ritual that relaxes you. From the massage...to the very cold mask...you really have to set aside an hour-and-a-half to get the full benefit. After the treatment, my skin felt firm...my pores tightened...and during the whole day, my skin was dewy and glowing. I didn't even put makeup on because my face already looked radiant!"

PS,000, according to his pay slips submitted to the Ombudsman.

The documents showed that Rabusa had a P10-million savings deposit with the AFP Savings and Loans Association Inc.; houses in Sta. Ana, Manila; in Better Living, Parañaque, and at the AFP Officers' Village Association Incorporated (AFPOVAI) in Fort Bonifacio, Makati; and seven vehicles registered under his name, his wife Debbie's name and those of other relatives.

"He (Rabusa) will be placed and assigned in GHQ (general headquarters) to give him time to shed light on the alleged corruption issue," Centcom spokesperson Lt. Col. Jefferson Omandan said yesterday. Omandan said the command received the directive on Rabusa's relief on Oct. 14.

Maj. Gen. Edilberto Adan, AFP deputy chief of staff and concurrent spokesperson, confirmed Rabusa's relief.

"The hierarchy of the AFP decided to relieve him from Central Command so that he will be available for any congressional inquiries," Adan said.

Legal technicalities

Rabusa denied any wrongdoing in a phone interview with the INQUIRER and said he would welcome the reopening of the investigation into his alleged ill-gotten wealth case.

He said he was cleared by the Armed Forces' Ombudsman the first time he was investigated in 2002 and he was confident he would be cleared again.

A lawyer at the AFP Ombudsman said that Rabusa was investigated in connection with a graft complaint filed in 2002. The lawyer said the case was set aside last year because of "legal technicalities" but would be revived "anytime now."

Omandan said he could not comment on matters involving Rabusa's assets as the colonel was only assigned to Centcom early this year. But he said Rabusa should be given the chance to explain his side.

Rabusa headed the 43rd Infantry Battalion based in Sogod, Southern Leyte, before he was transferred to Centcom as chief of operations.

During his stint in Southern Leyte, he was credited with clearing the province of its insurgency problem. He also spearheaded rescue operations during the Panay Island landslides in December 2003 that claimed over 100 lives.

Leyte's adopted son

For his efforts, the Southern Leyte provincial government and the Maasin city government separately declared Rabusa an adopted son of Southern Leyte and Maasin City.

Omandan confirmed that Centcom had received both verbal and written orders from AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya for all military units to be on alert against groups that might exploit the corruption scandal in the military.

"The members of the AFP are enjoined to be very alert and vigilant this time because of the controversy arising from [the investigation] ... because this may be exploited by some groups that (would want) to destroy the AFP," Omandan said, recalling the gist of the order.

Coup talk squelched

Asked what groups he was referring to, Omandan mentioned the communist New People's Army (NPA).

Omandan stressed there was no truth to reports that a coup might happen, saying personnel at Centcom were not demoralized by the corruption controversy.

"We have not changed our attitude towards work, although everyday we can read in the papers the negative issue against the military," he added.

US court gives OK to Ang extradition

By TJ Burgoña

FINDING "probable cause" that Charile "Atong" Ang had committed the crime of plunder, a United States district judge ruled that Ang, a crony and co-accused of jailed President Joseph Estrada, be extradited to the Philippines.

Judge Lawrence R. Leavitt of the US District Court of Nevada issued the ruling on Oct. 14. The information was released by the United States Embassy yesterday.

Leavitt based his ruling on the testimony of Ilocos Sur Gov. Luis "Chavit" Singson which he found to be "reliable and admissible in extradition hearings as statements against penal interest."

He said Singson's testimony clearly placed Ang "in the middle of the transaction" and that he had "participated" in Estrada's alleged diversion of P130 million in tax money for the latter's personal use in August 1998.

"The court finds that there is probable cause to believe that Ang committed the crime of plunder," Leavitt said in his ruling.

Ang has until Nov. 8 to file evidence supporting his defense against extradition. The US government must file its response not later than Nov. 19.

Leavitt said that while there were slight discrepancies in Singson's testimony, like the number of bags of money, these did not relate to the essential facts.

He said the bank records and other documents tended to corroborate Singson's testimony and "point to Ang's involvement."

The judge also said Singson's testimony on Ang's participation in the "Jueteng scheme" with Singson and Estrada "was plausible."

He said Ang's characterization of the testimony as false was "not supported by the record."

"The ruling is another example of the ongoing RP-US cooperation in law enforcement," the US Embassy said in a statement.

stances. Yes, he made a lot of money. But nobody can say he did that exclusively. Higher ranking military officials might have stolen more. How come he's the lone focus of this controversy?"

Probably in Garcia's mind, the official theorized, "the entire government should be on trial because corruption has been going on since time immemorial."

Garcia, who is being grilled by members of the House committee on defense and on banks for his questionable assets here and abroad, has maintained a stoic stance with hardly a trace of guilt or embarrassment.

When not answering questions from lawmakers, he kept his eyes downcast. On at least four occasions, he looked up to contemplate the ceiling.

At one point on Monday, the embattled general who had never been in combat in all his 33 years in the military flashed his warrior side when he rejected a suggestion that he serve as a state witness.

"I have nothing to testify," he flatly said in response to a question from Taguig-Pateros Rep. Alan Peter Cayetano.

But one of Garcia's ex-classmates said another possible reason for his tough demeanor was the support he was probably enjoying from a good number of military officers.

"Perhaps the senior officers' corps is giving him the toughness to stand his ground against these congressmen," the classmate said.

The reports on Garcia's unexplained wealth have dumbfounded his friends and colleagues, who described him as "kind, soft-spoken, helpful and generous."

But text messages circulating among PMA alumni have grown vicious with each discovery of Garcia's alleged assets.

"Only death to Garcia can redeem the AFP. Please pass," read a text message that the Inquirer received last week.

Why PMA is ...

going around? That PMA now stands for "Philippine Millionaires Academy," Pangasinan Rep. Amado Espino Jr. said, his voice slightly quivering.

Garcia bowed his head. A couple of chairs from him, AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya gazed straight ahead.

"There is low morale in the academy," said Espino, a 1972 graduate of the Philippines' premier military school. "The cadets are asking, 'Sir, is it true that the Garcia sons travel business class?'"

Garcia's chin dropped lower to his chest, his shoulders rising and falling as he took deep breaths.

An investigation by the Ombudsman showed that Garcia, with the help of his wife Clarita and two of their sons, Ian Carl and Juan Paolo, moved at least P44 million to the United States in the past 11 years.

The Garcia brothers were held at the San Francisco airport in December last year for not declaring that they were carrying $100,000.

The family is said to own a condominium at Trump Park Avenue and an apartment on East 34th St., both in New York, a house in Westerville, Ohio, and some 40 accounts in some banks in Metro Manila, among other assets.

A variation on the PMA joke was circulated last weekend. It read: "What's the best business school in the country? PMA—because it produces millionaires!"

controversy, the biggest of which is the alleged ill-gotten wealth amassed by Maj. Gen. Carlos Garcia.

Maj. Gen. Ralph Flores is facing investigation for allegedly falsifying his birth records to extend his service. Air Force Brig. Gen. Prospero Ocampo is also under investigation but military officials have yet to reveal what Ocampo is being investigated for.

Recapture 'lost glory'

A member of the Philippine Military Academy Class of 1972, Abu vowed to restore the AFP's "lost glory" and to pursue cases against Garcia and the other officers.

He expressed surprise over reports that Garcia, a former AFP comptroller, had allegedly amassed millions of pesos worth of cash and real estate both in the Philippines and in the United States.

Shocked

"Personally, I was shocked by the revelations. It suddenly came out of nowhere because nobody really talks about these kind of things openly," Abu told the Inquirer in an interview.

Asked if Garcia's lifestyle had hinted of his fabulous fortune, Abu said: "We don't look at each other's lifestyle because we just work together. That is witch-hunting. Probably if we're neighbors or close friends."

Despite mounting documentary evidence of Garcia's wealth, Abu gave his beleaguered colleague the benefit of the doubt.

"We can't say that it's impossible (for Garcia to have built up such a fortune) because he might have some sources of income," he said. "It's hard to judge another person, that's a sin."

Abu was introduced by President Macapagal-Arroyo as the new AFP chief of staff at a luncheon with reporters in Malacañang.

Ms Arroyo, who had just emerged from a three-hour meeting of the Cabinet group of the National Security Council, said she brought Abu to the luncheon to brief reporters on the supposed link of the Communist Party of the Philippines to international terrorist groups. (See story on Page A7.)

"This is going to be the most challenging responsibility in my entire military career given what is happening now in the Armed Forces," the be-medaled general with the curious name said at the luncheon press conference.

The honor of the organization is under a cloud of suspicion, so it's my job to bring back whatever (in) our honor is tarnished (and) the glory of the Armed Forces," Abu said.

Asked what his policy on Garcia would be, Abu read his "acceptance

Abu also stopped subsidizing the electric bills of the officers and the enlisted men who live in the housing area maintained by the Army, Pascual said.

"It's the dark ages here. We are all in the energy conservation mode," a colonel's wife jokingly told the Inquirer.

The wife, who asked not to be named, said the hallways were so dark because "the consumption is charged to us." Before, she said, the bill was paid for by the military.

Abu also imposed a limit on foreign travels and schooling by Army officers. Those who were due to travel were banned from making "exit calls," Pascual said.

"Exit calls" refers to the practice of visiting a ranking Army officer, like the Army logistics chief (G4) or the Army comptroller (G6), for the "pabao" (allowance) of an officer scheduled to travel abroad either for schooling or conference.

An Army source said the "exit money" was a product of conversion, a military practice of transforming procurements into cash.

speech" upon the prodding of Defense Secretary Avelino Cruz Jr.

"General Abaya has initiated many reforms in the Armed Forces and these I will pursue vigorously. Yet, more than this I will initiate reforms to fine-tune your Armed Forces and make it more responsive to the beat of the times," Abu said.

He said he would support defense reforms to increase the capability of the AFP and maximize the use of limited resources as well as put in place a "strong check and balance that will promote transparency and accountability."

Daunting task

"Having said these, I will pursue the case against ranking officers who have committed serious infractions of the AFP's code of conduct," he said.

"I know that this is going to be a daunting task, but I am determined to ensure that your Armed Forces maintains the highest standard of honor and discipline. And I am asking the cooperation of each and every member of the Armed Forces. This is the time for progressive change," Abu said.

"While doing these, we should not lose sight that our mandate is to protect the people and defend the State," he added.

House probe

Ms Arroyo promptly announced the replacement of Abaya as he and other military officers were being grilled in the House of Representatives for the corruption scandal involving Garcia.

Garcia told the House committee on national defense that as comptroller he released military funds only with the approval of the AFP chief of staff.

Abu said that Ms Arroyo told him of his appointment only yesterday and that the President had not even given him his marching orders.

"Firstly, I am very grateful to the President for giving me the trust and confidence to command a critically challenged Armed Forces," Abu said.

He said his assignment to Mindanao had given him the "feel of the pulse" of the soldiers in the field. "I know what they want."

Army officials described Abu as an "unassuming, soft-spoken and a well-rounded" military officer.

"I think he's one of the most respected officers in the AFP," Cruz said.

Classmate of Indon president

Cruz said Abu was a classmate of newly elected Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono at the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth in Kansas, USA.

"We're good friends, we've (mainly) maintained communication," Abu said of the Indonesian president.

Abu obtained an MBA from the University of the Philippines (1980) and a Master of Arts in War Studies from King's College at the University of London (1998).

He attended various military courses, including the Scout Ranger Course, Infantry Officer Basic Course, Infantry Officer Advance Course which he took up at Port Benning in Georgia, USA, and a seminar on defense management at the ADPA in Canberra, Australia.

Like Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita, a former defense secretary, Abu comes from Batangas.

Enrile to young solons: Work harder, longer on budget

By Luige A. del Puerto and Michael Lim Ubac

EMBARRASSED at the prospect of yet another reenacted national budget, veteran legislator Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile challenged his much younger colleagues in the House of Representatives to work without let-up to pass the 2005 appropriations bill.

The 80-year-old Enrile challenged the House members to work 16-hour days, which he said he and his colleagues in the Senate would match with 20-hour work days.

"Get down to work. No night clubs, no playing of golf, no sniffing of shabu, no smoking of cigarettes," he said during the launch of the opposition's Rebolusyon Kontra Gutom program in Tuytay, Rizal, yesterday.

Senate President Franklin Drilon said on Sunday that because the appropriations bill was being held up in the House, Congress may fail to approve the 2005 budget, which would mean that the government would again be operating on the reenacted 2003 budget.

Enrile said that if the budget was reenacted a second straight year, Congress may as well give up its function of sorting out and approving the budget and leave the job to the executive branch.

"It means that we are no longer following the Constitution, that we are lazy and that the government has no discipline," he said.

Enrile said he could not believe how some legislators could even think of going on vacation at this time.

"I told them to postpone their vacation and solve the problems of the country first. Their seats have not even been warmed yet and they are already on vacation; they have gone roaming to other parts of the world," he said.

Administration Sen. Richard Gordon yesterday assured the public that the Senate was willing to work double time to finish the budget deliberations by the end of the year.

GMA: Local Reds tying up with terrorists

PRESIDENT Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday said the government has found evidence of growing links between foreign terrorists and communist guerrillas waging a decades-old Maoist rebellion in the country.

She said she had ordered a review of the government's strategy to address the 35-year-old insurgency, which includes peace talks with the rebels that stalled earlier this year.

"In view of recent developments, I have instructed the national security agencies of the government to come up with a comprehensive reassessment of our strategy vis-a-vis the CPP-NPA and a review of our negotiations with the NDF," referring to the rebels' political wing, the National Democratic Front.

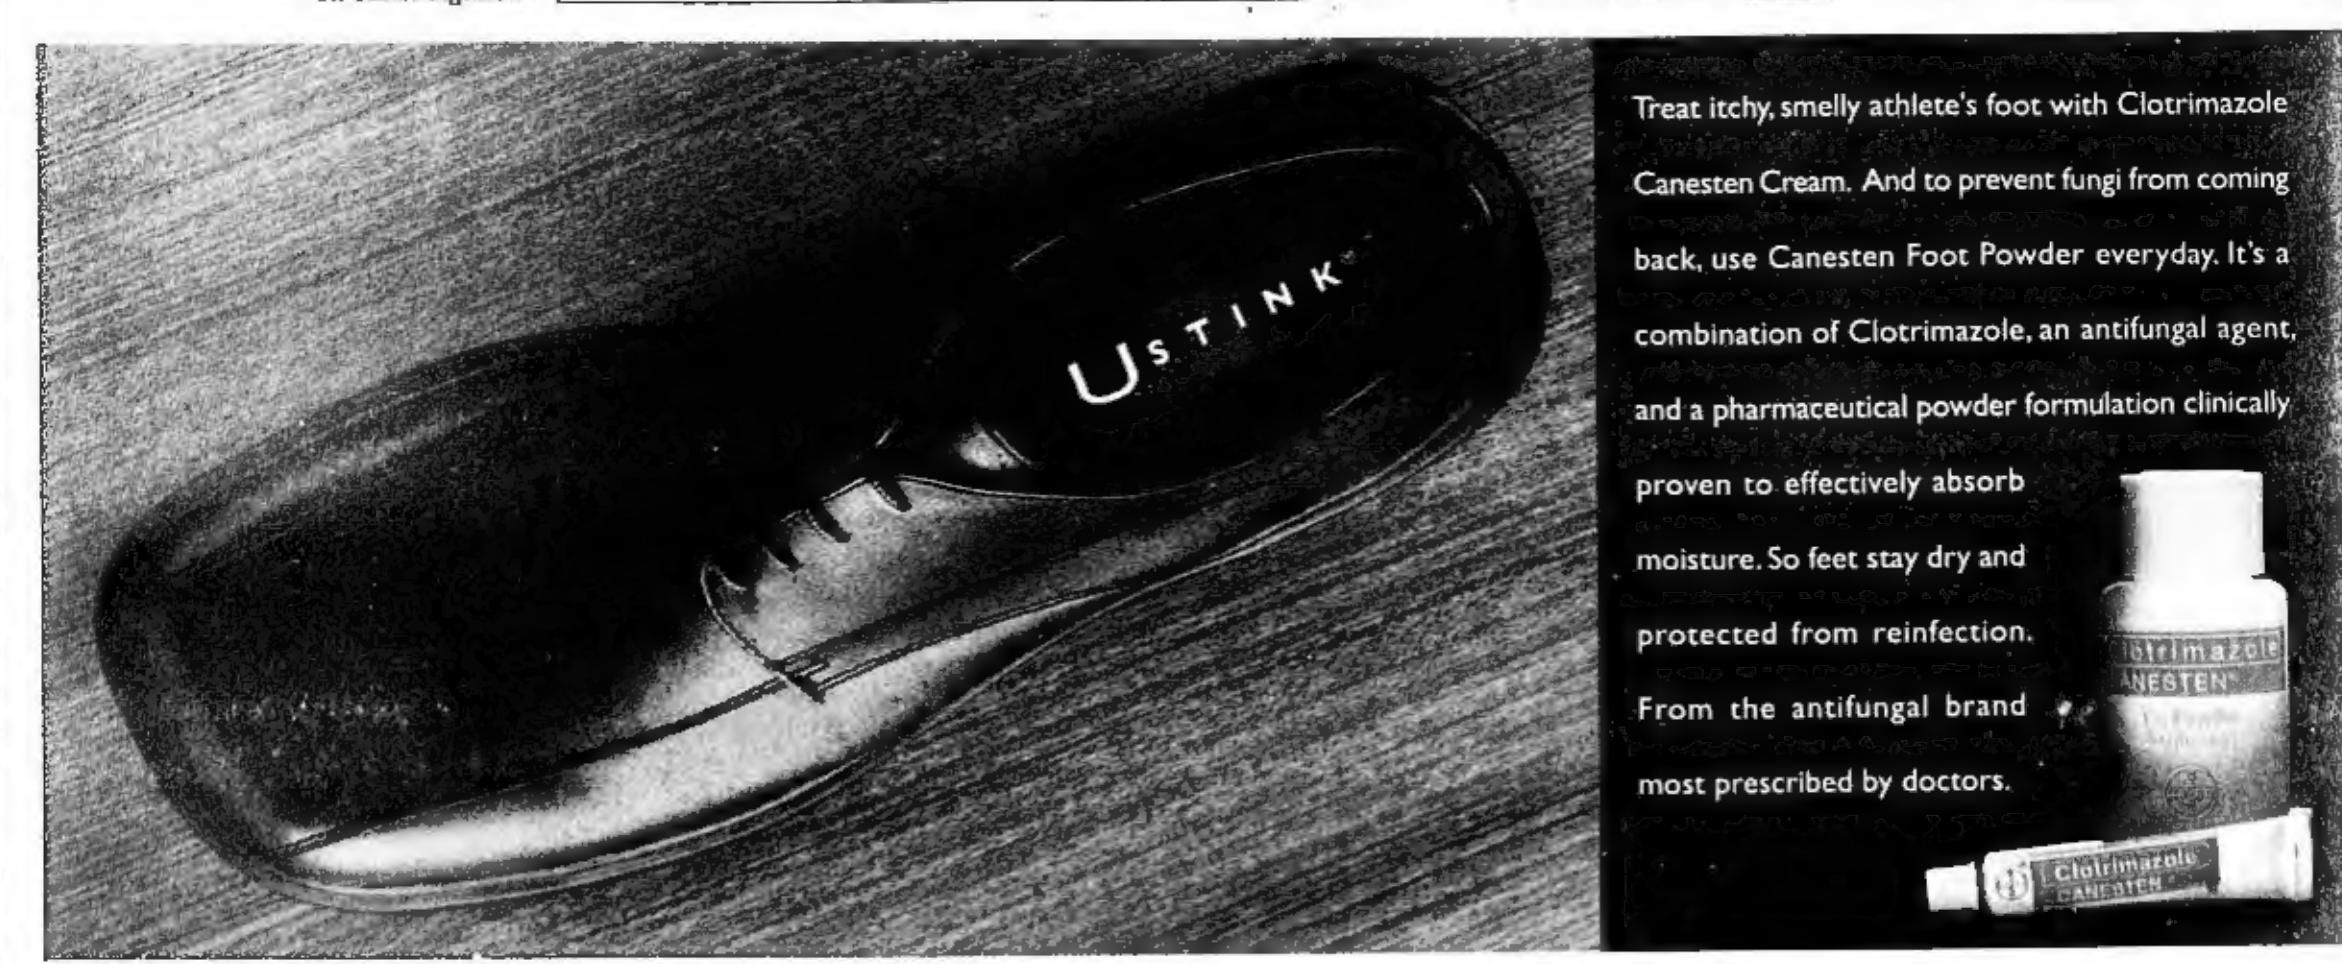

National Security Adviser Hermogenes Ebdane said the recent developments alluded to by the President were the murder of former NPA rebel Arturo Tabara, the consolidation and expansion of the CPP-NPA in the rural areas, and the order of Communist Party of the Philippines founder Jose Maria Sison to conduct operations against the government on a regular basis and increase the collection of progressive taxes.

Defense Secretary Avelino Cruz stressed that the President's order to reassess the peace talks included deciding whether or not the government should continue talks with the CPP-NPA and the NDF, and whether to label the communist rebels a terrorist threat.

Ms Arroyo claimed that intelligence reports showed growing links between the leftist rebels and the international terrorist groups.

Ebdane and Cruz, however, could not cite any specific terrorist groups which had hooked up with local leftist rebels.

Court lets Jinggoy fly to US anew

THE SANDIGANBAYAN has allowed Sen. Jinggoy Estrada to travel to the United States a second time amid the objection of prosecution lawyers who insist he continues to be a flight risk because of the plunder charges he is facing.

In a two-page resolution released yesterday, the Sandiganbayan Special Division under acting Chair Teresita J. Leonardo-de Castro granted Estrada's motion to travel to Los Angeles, California, to attend the funeral of his maternal grandfather, Filemon Fernandez.

In granting the request, the court set several conditions, among them that he limit his trip to the Los Angeles area and only from Oct. 19 to Oct. 25. He was also asked to post a P100,000 travel bond.

The court said Estrada had a "justifiable reason to travel" to the US and "unless it can be shown that the exercise of the right to travel may prove clearly imminent to the general welfare, no governmental action invading this right is justifiable."

"The accused movant is an incumbent senator of the Republic and when he was allowed to travel abroad [the first time] he returned and dutifully complied with all the conditions imposed by this court," the Sandiganbayan said.

Estrada was set to leave last night.

But prosecution lawyers were vehemently against Estrada's trip, saying he remained one of the principal accused in the plunder case against his father, ousted President Joseph Estrada, and the latter's private lawyer Edward Serapio and was out on bail.

Even if he returned from his US trip in June, the prosecution said "it is undeniable that the risk of flight is continuously there."

Diesel prices hiked

JUST a week after hiking their prices, oil firms Caltex Phil. Inc. and Total (Phil.) Corp. again raised the prices of their diesel and kerosene by 35 centavos a liter at 6 p.m. yesterday.

New oil player Flying V followed suit at midnight last night.

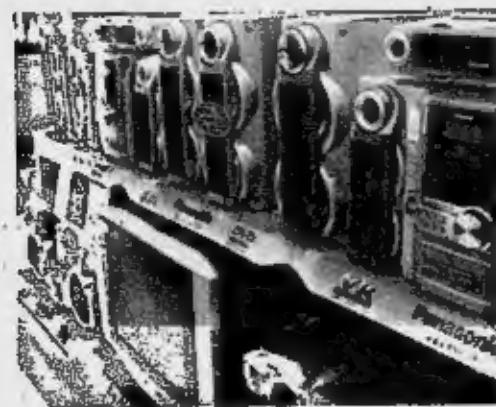

Caltex likewise raised the price of cooking gas by 50 centavos per kilogram or P16.50 for every 11-kg cylinder.

Refiners Petron Corp. and Pilipinas Shell Petroleum Corp., as well as refined petroleum product importers Eastern Petroleum Corp., Seaoil Petroleum Corp. and Uniloy Phil. Petroleum Inc. have yet to announce their own price adjustments.

Last week, the oil firms, except Petron, increased diesel and kerosene prices by 45 centavos a liter. Petron raised the prices of the same products by only 35 centavos. Abigail L. Ho

Oil prices tumble below $53 as fuel costs hit economy

LONDON—Oil prices fell for a second session on Tuesday, taking US crude under $53, on signs that high energy costs are cutting into economic growth.

US light crude by 0945 GMT was off 74 cents at $52.93 a barrel following a $1.26 slide on Monday from Friday's record closing high of $54.93 a barrel. Prices are down nearly four percent in two days.

Brent crude in London eased 55 cents to $48.36 a barrel.

The reversal comes on growing evidence that rocketing fuel costs are starting to slow the economic growth that helped ignite this year's $20-a-barrel rally.

On Monday, Wall Street banks Morgan Stanley and J.P. Morgan cut their estimates for 2005 growth, blaming high fuel costs for a predicted slowdown in consumer demand.

"While high prices affect consumer spending immediately, typically the demand side response to high prices takes 3 to 6 quarters to feed through to consumer price indices," said Marshall Hall of London energy consultancy EMC.

"That means we will still be feeling the effect of $50 oil on the economy in late 2005."

Morgan Stanley reduced its forecast for global expansion next year to 3.6 percent, down from 3.9 percent, and warned of more possible revisions.

"As the prospects of a full-blown oil shock rise, the prospects of outright global recession in 2005 loom more and more likely," said Morgan Stanley chief economist Stephen Roach.

J.P. Morgan scaled back its forecast for US growth to 3.25 percent for the first half of 2005, down from 4 percent.

Officials in the United States, Germany and Japan have warned that surging oil prices may put the brakes on economic growth.

"We are looking at the rise in oil prices as the biggest risk factor if it continues for a long period," Japan's Economics Minister Heizo Takenaka said.

Opco on Monday cut its forecast for world oil demand growth next year by 130,000 barrels per day to 1.61 million bpd in anticipation of the impact of high prices on fuel consumption.

Demand growth this year, led by China, has raced along at a 25-year-high of 2.6 million bpd on the 83 million bpd world market.

But Chinese oil consumption growth is now showing signs of slowing.

The head of Asia's biggest oil refiner, China's Sinopec Corp., predicted that domestic demand in the world's second-biggest oil consumer would moderate next year.

"We expect China's oil products demand growth to slow slightly from this year to 8-10 percent," Sinopec president Wang Jiming told reporters in Beijing.

US warplanes hit rebel hideouts in Fallujah

BAGHDAD—US warplanes hit the rebel-held Iraqi city of Fallujah overnight as part of a drive to thwart expected attacks during the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan and ensure security for national polls due in January.

US and Iraqi forces also surrounded the town of Duluya, north of Baghdad, raiding homes, detaining scores of suspected rebels and calling in helicopter strikes on suspected insurgents hiding in surrounding orchards, Iraqi officials said on Tuesday.

There was no word on casualties from either operation.

The 96 minutes of air strikes on Fallujah, 50 km west of Baghdad, destroyed safe houses and weapons caches used by followers of Jordanian Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, the US' top enemy in Iraq, the US military said in a statement on Tuesday.

"Multiple secondary explosions indicate a significant amount of explosives or ammunition inside the houses," it said.

The United States said Zarqawi's group was using the houses to plan suicide car bombings during Ramadan, a month that saw a dramatic spike in bloodshed a year ago and which comes just ahead of elections set for January.

Zarqawi's Tawhid wal Jihad (One God and Holy War) group claimed twin suicide bombings that killed five people last week in Baghdad's fortress-like Green Zone, home to the interim Iraqi administration and the US and British embassies.

Washington has blamed Zarqawi and his followers for some of the worst militant violence since last year's invasion of Iraq.

Iraq's US-backed administration is battling to pacify the country and win back insurgent-held areas before the election, which is seen as a crucial step in Iraq's efforts to rebuild.

Duluya is about 20 km south of the town of Samarra, where US and Iraqi forces carried out a large offensive this month to restore control.

The United States, Iraq and other countries have been putting pressure on the United Nations to send senior staff into Iraq quickly to help prepare for the elections.

But the White House said on Monday US military commanders and the interim Baghdad government had rejected a Saudi plan for an all-Muslim force to protect UN election staff in Iraq.

"The Iraqi interim government had some real concerns about having troops from a neighboring country inside Iraq," said White House spokesperson Scott McClellan. "The multinational commanders also had some concerns about forces operating outside the chain of command structure."

Britain is considering a US request to move troops now based in southern Iraq into more potentially dangerous areas to cover for US units battling rebels in Fallujah and elsewhere.

British Defense Secretary Geoff Hoon said he had not made any decision but expected a final assessment from his officials next week. Any such deployment could re-ignite anger over Prime Minister Tony Blair's support for the war.

Iraq's interim administration said on Monday a weapons amnesty that it considered successful in a restive area of the capital would be expanded to the rest of the country.

National Security Adviser Kassim Daoud said the cash-for-guns drive in Baghdad's Sadr City slum would be extended two days to Thursday. It was not clear if the expansion of the amnesty across the country would include a cash buyback.

In a country awash with guns, Iraqis are allowed one AK-47 assault rifle per household and handguns are largely overlooked.

But many families possess more than one weapon.

US forces on Monday released Fallujah's chief negotiator, whom they detained on Friday, after battles and air strikes on the edge of the rebel-held Sunni Muslim stronghold.

Interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi says he remains open to a negotiated settlement in Fallujah, but some senior Western diplomats say the chances are fading by the day.

Fallujah residents, enraged by US air strikes that they say kill civilians, deny any knowledge of Zarqawi's network.

Freed Fallujah representative Khaled al-Jumali said the hunt for Zarqawi was a pretext to attack the town, comparing it to US assertions that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein had weapons of mass destruction before last year's invasion.

Mortar attack kills, wounds 100

BAGHDAD—Iraqi officials said Tuesday more than 100 Iraqis were killed and wounded when a mortar attack hit an Iraqi National Guard headquarters north of Baghdad. Six mortar rounds fell on National Guard offices in an early morning attack in Masha'hid, 40 km north of Baghdad, said Iraqi police and National Guard officers under condition of anonymity. There was no breakdown on the number of those killed and injured. US Blackhawk helicopters evacuated all the injured, police said.

Spain nabs 7 terror suspects

MADRID—Seven North Africans arrested by Spanish police were plotting a major bombing attack against the National Court, a hub of Spain's investigations of Islamic terrorism, newspapers said Tuesday. El País quoted police sources as saying the plot was only in the preliminary stages because there was no evidence the suspects had actually obtained explosives. Another newspaper, El Mundo, said the plan involved detonating a truck loaded with 500 kilos of explosives outside the courthouse, located on a busy avenue in downtown Madrid. The interior ministry and officials at the court declined to comment on the reports. El País said the arrests were ordered as part of a probe undertaken by the court's Judge Baltasar Garzon, Spain's leading antiterrorism magistrate. Those arrested included at least four Algerians and one Moroccan in Madrid, El Ejido, Ganda, Malaga and Almeria. They were identified as Small Latrech, Ali Omar "Jalloul," Djamel Merabet, Mourad Yala "Abu Anas," Ahmed Mohamed and Magid Machacha. One remained unidentified.

UN, Brazil to solve nuke impasse

RIO DE JANEIRO—The United Nations and Brazil moved on Monday to break a months-long deadlock over inspections to verify Latin America's largest nation is not diverting enriched uranium for weapons. UN nuclear experts met officials from the Brazilian National Nuclear Energy Commission and other nuclear-related bodies in Rio de Janeiro before Tuesday's visit to the Resende plant in Rio state, where enrichment can only begin with UN approval. Odair Dias Goncalves, president of the government's commission, said the International Atomic Energy Agency team would verify if Brazil's latest proposal for inspections being confined to parts of the new plant would guarantee adequate control over nuclear nonproliferation. Brazil, home to the world's fourth largest reserve of uranium, says its enrichment operations will be entirely peaceful and also very small compared to other countries. The country has two nuclear reactors and is mulling a third.

Astronaut to vote from space

CAPE CANAVERAL—The space station's newest astronaut will cast his ballot in the presidential election from 362 km up, with NASA's help. Leroy Chiao said Monday that the space agency has worked hard with local and federal authorities so he can vote from the orbiting complex, his home until spring. He will cast his ballot via a secure e-mail connection, much the same way another astronaut did from Russia's Mir space station in 1997. US astronauts, most of whom live around Houston, won the right to vote from space under a Texas bill signed into law by then-Gov. George W. Bush. "Definitely, I'll be exercising my civic right and my civic duty," Chiao said. Chiao arrived at the station over the weekend via a Russian Soyuz spacecraft that also carried two cosmonauts, one of whom will spend the next six months with him in orbit.

Bush, Kerry trade barbs over Iraq, war on terror

WASHINGTON — President George W. Bush and Democratic Sen. John Kerry traded sharp accusations over Iraq and the war on terror on Monday, with Bush condemning Kerry's "strategy of retreat" and Kerry saying the administration's Iraq policy had been "hijacked by ideologues."

Barely two weeks before an extremely close Nov. 2 election, the two White House rivals ratcheted up their war of words with some of their toughest attacks yet.

Bush traveled to Democratic-leaning New Jersey to remind voters of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks and his "clear moral purpose" in response. He contrasted that with Kerry, who he condemned for taking the "easy path of protest and defeatism."

Kerry, meanwhile, kicked off early voting in the crucial battleground state of Florida with a sharp indictment of Bush's "arrogant" handling of the Iraq war and of health care issues at home.

"Despite the president's arrogant boasting that he has done everything right in Iraq and that he's made no mistakes, the truth is beginning to catch up with him," the Massachusetts senator said in Tampa, Florida.

Kerry cited a Washington Post report about complaints that the former top US commander in Iraq, Lt. Gen. Ricardo Sanchez, sent to the Pentagon last winter regarding shortages of parts and equipment.

"Mr. President, you can choose to ignore the facts, but in the end, you can't hide the truth from the American people," he said. "I will never allow our policy to be hijacked by ideologues at the expense of the best advice of our military professional commanders."

Bush, meanwhile, told supporters Kerry did not share his commitment to victory in Iraq and had a "fundamental misunderstanding of the war on terror."

Burma PM sacked, arrested for corruption

BANGKOK—Burma's (Myanmar) Prime Minister General Khin Nyunt—among the most reformist of the military regime's leaders—has been sacked and placed under house arrest for alleged corruption, a Thai government spokesman said Tuesday.

"The Thai government has learned through diplomatic channels from the Thai ambassador in Rangoon that the Burma prime minister Khin Nyunt was dismissed and detained under house arrest on corruption allegations," spokesperson Jakrapob Penkair told reporters.

The premier, number three in the Burma leadership, was arrested in a shock move on Monday night after he returned to the capital from a visit to the central town of Mandalay, according to sources.

Khin Nyunt, 65, was the face of the hardline regime overseas and supported dialogue with detained opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi. But he appeared increasingly marginalized with the rise of hardliners within the leadership, according to analysts.

Senior General Than Shwe, head of the junta known as the State Peace and Development Council, strongly opposes allowing Suu Kyi any role in the political process.

Analysts saw the move as a consolidation of his power and said it was likely to signal a continued hard line against supporters of Suu Kyi, who has now been detained for 16 months during her third period of house arrest.

The sacking was also the culmination of growing tensions between rival factions within the leadership, sources in Burma said.

An analyst in Rangoon said the sacking was likely to have major repercussions and followed feuds between military intelligence, headed by Khin Nyunt for 20 years, and the main body of the military leadership.

"He (Khin Nyunt) was recognized as having some kind of international experience," the analyst said.

"They must have reached an impasse to come to such a situation that is putting in danger the unity of the army. This is a first." The isolated regime closed its border checkpoints as the drama played out and telephone communication with Rangoon became difficult amid swirling rumors of high-level changes.

Thai security sources said Lt. Gen. San Pwint, who has been involved in a drugs crackdown and negotiations with opposition ethnic groups, would replace Khin Nyunt. He is not seen as a strong ally of either faction.

"I don't think there will be any unrest or bloodshed in Burma concerning this change as Burma is known for its decisive action," Chavalit Vongchayudh, Thai deputy prime minister, told reporters amid reports of trucks of troops driving around Rangoon.

Khin Nyunt was appointed as premier in August 2003, soon after Burma was condemned internationally for the detention of Suu Kyi following a violent clash between her supporters and a pro-Junta mob.

The premier announced a seven-point "road map to democracy" but the program has stalled amid international complaints that it is a sham while Suu Kyi remains under house arrest.

Her party, the National League for Democracy, won national elections in 1990 but was not allowed to rule by the military.

"This is the hardliners consolidating power and we are concerned it means the country is going back to isolation and away from the democracy road map," said Sunai Phasuk, an advisor to the Thai Senate committee on foreign affairs.

"If Than Shwe remains Than Shwe, a man who puts military ahead of political negotiations, then the road ahead is very serious," he said.

Burma has been ruled by the military since 1962 and has faced mounting international sanctions from the EU and United States because of the lack of movement in democratic reforms. AFP

Indonesia's Megawati leaving as she had governed—silently

MEGAWATI

JAKARTA—Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri will leave office Wednesday in the same fashion many say characterized her three years as the leader of the world's most populous Muslim nation—silent and aloof.

In her latest display of seemingly imperious reticence, the 57-year-old former housewife and daughter of Indonesia's founding father, Sukarno, has refused to explicitly concede defeat to President-elect Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, and aides say she's refused an invitation to his inauguration Wednesday. And since her loss, she hasn't spoken of her plans.

"Her actions and remarks, so far, during this historic transition period, have left us dumbfounded," read a recent editorial in the Jakarta Post daily. "Ignorant and spiteful would be descriptions of her."

Megawati's behavior, however, is not surprising for those who have followed her presidency, during which she rarely addressed the nation and often seemed uninterested with the affairs of government or ordinary Indonesians.

But the current fuss over her behavior is threatening to overshadow her modest achievements as Indonesia's first female leader.

Analysts say her main legacy will be the success of the Sept. 20 polls, where she suffered a landslide defeat to former general Yudhoyono.

Those polls were Indonesia's first direct presidential elections, cementing the country's transition to democracy after the downfall of longtime dictator General Suharto in 1998.

The elections followed first round voting in July and parliamentary polls in April. All the ballots were peaceful and fair and were taken as proof that democracy and Islam are compatible.

"Megawati stabilized the country and has oversaw its path to democracy," said Dewi Fortuna Anwar, a former adviser to ex-President B.J. Habibie. "That's no mean feat."

She has also been credited for improving security in several provinces once wracked with religious and ethnic violence in the sprawling country.

Under Megawati's watch, the economy also improved slightly, growing by about 5 percent annually, but still not enough to create the jobs needed for millions of unemployed.

Megawati became president in 2001 after parliament impeached her predecessor Abdurrahman Wahid for incompetence. She had been serving as Wahid's deputy.

After the chaos of the Wahid years, there were high hopes Megawati could push through reforms on the back of popularity, much of which rested on a reputation for compassion and her bloodline as the child of the still revered Sukarno.

But her support quickly plummeted after she failed to tackle rampant graft and attract foreign investment. Her silence infuriated even her supporters, who urged her to take a more active role. AP

Bird flu may have killed 23 tigers in zoo

BANGKOK—A Thai tiger zoo housing hundreds of the big cats was shut down Tuesday after preliminary bird flu tests revealed 23 tigers had likely died of the virus and another 30 had fallen ill.

Thailand's bird flu task force head, deputy prime minister Charnron Chaisang, said the Sri Racha Tiger Zoo's cats most likely contracted bird flu after being fed raw chickens.

"Initial test results revealed 19 tigers may have died from bird flu virus and more tiger deaths this morning brought the total number to 23," Charnron said, adding "the zoo has now been closed for tourists."

The deputy premier said authorities were waiting for the results of a second round of conclusive tests before confirming bird flu in the tigers.

The kingdom's Livestock Development Department said officials were working to quarantine tigers at the eastern Chonburi province zoo, which houses some 400 of the feline predators.

"Officials have already separated sick tigers and sprayed germ killers at Sri Racha Tiger Zoo, which will be closed indefinitely until the all-clear is given," said the department's Director General Yukol Lumlamthong.

He said the first tiger died on Oct. 14, and since then a total of 53 cats have tested positive to bird flu in first-round tests.

The World Health Organization said last month it was taking seriously a scientific report that domestic cats could contract bird flu and pass it on to humans after Dutch researchers experimentally infected six European short-hair cats with the H5N1 virus. AFP

Singapore is deadliest place for criminals—AI

SINGAPORE—Rights group Amnesty International challenged Singapore on Tuesday to disclose the number of executions this year, saying the wealthy island puts more people to death than any other country on a per capita basis.

"In the absence of full disclosure of official statistics, the organization remains concerned that Singapore may continue to have the highest number of per capita executions in the world," Amnesty International Southeast Asian official Tim Parratt said.

Amnesty's call comes a day before Singapore's Court of Appeal rules on the case of 24-year-old Australian Nguyen Tuong Van, an ethnic Vietnamese man found guilty in March of smuggling 400 grams of heroin and sentenced to death.

About 400 people have been hanged in Singapore since 1991, mostly for drug trafficking, giving the Southeast Asian island of 4.2 million people the highest execution rate in the world relative to its population, Amnesty said.

According to Amnesty data drawn from media reports and public documents, between 1994 and 1999, an average of 13.57 executions were carried out per one million of the population, three times higher than the next country on the list, Saudi Arabia.

Singapore's drug laws are among the world's harshest.

Anyone aged 18 or over convicted of carrying more than 15 grams of heroin faces mandatory execution by hanging.

Nguyen's lawyers appealed the verdict and the London-based human rights group said it would seek clemency from Singapore President S.R. Nathan if the death sentence is upheld.

Amnesty said in January that executions in Singapore were "shockingly high" and "shrouded in secrecy," calling on the state to abolish the death penalty by issuing a moratorium on all executions and commuting all death sentences to prison terms.

Singapore's government said it imposed capital punishment "only for the most serious crimes," that the death penalty deterred major drug syndicates from setting up in Singapore and that Singapore applied standards of transparency.

Although prison officials confirmed last year that about 400 people had been executed since 1991, government officials declined requests by Reuters to specify how many people have been sent to the gallows this year. Reuters

Liberation

EUPHORIA and thanksgiving are strange reactions to bombing, shelling and death. This was, however, the reaction of an overwhelming number of Filipinos to the news that Gen. Douglas MacArthur, together with officials of the Commonwealth government in exile, led by President Sergio Osmeña, Carlos P. Romulo and Basilio Valdez, had landed in Leyte 60 years ago today.

The return of the Americans brought EDITORIAL with it hardship: a great path of destruction was created as the Americans took Leyte and then embarked on taking Luzon. The destruction would culminate in the devastation of Manila, the burning and shelling of which dwarfed even the wrecking of other Philippine cities such as Davao, Cebu and Baguio.

The reaction of Filipinos to the destruction of their homes and the killing of so many who had yearned for liberation was not unique. The French, too, saw many killed and many cities ruined because of the Allied invasion of Europe. In the wake of the D-Day anniversary earlier this year, veterans were interviewed who, to this day, marvel at the outpouring of joy, even amid death and destruction, that greeted Allied forces. The same was the case in Belgium, in Holland and many other occupied countries.

What set apart Filipinos was that they welcomed the Allies while so many of our neighbors and fellow Asians viewed their return with suspicion and even fear. The reason for this is that among all the colonized countries in the world, only the Philippines had been promised, and expected, its independence.

It is difficult for the Filipinos of today to appreciate the tremendous prestige and even trust that the Americans, our allies in the war, enjoyed in this part of the world. Even as Filipinos ecstatically welcomed the return of the Americans, many Asian leaders looked to America for sympathy and even help. Mao Zedong came close to undertaking an alliance with the Americans. Ho Chi Minh tried to enlist American aid. The Indians during the war had looked to America to put pressure on Britain in order to exact concessions from their imperial rulers. If for reasons of ideology, Mao and Ho Chi Minh had no great love of the American way of life, they had some respect for it. And, like Indian leaders such as Nehru, whatever misgivings they may have felt were outweighed by their hatred for the fascism that Japan represented.

This is also something difficult for the Filipinos of today to appreciate: that the hatred of the majority of Filipinos for the Japanese would have been such, that they preferred their cities wrecked and so many dead to remaining one minute longer under the Japanese. This is why the generation alive during the war mostly referred—and still refer—to the return of the Americans as "liberation."

To us, today, "liberation" sounds hollow, if not downright delusional. And yet it is what Filipinos felt at the time, and we should respect their feelings. With a few exceptions, this is how they genuinely felt, and in this, they were no different from the French, the Dutch, the Chinese, Koreans and even Vietnamese. World War II was the last "good war," it is often said, because the good were so clearly differentiated from the bad: Nazism and Italian and Japanese fascism were so bad that imperialists could look good.

After World War II, the peoples and leaders who had looked to the America of Franklin D. Roosevelt were bitterly disappointed by the America of Harry S. Truman. Disappointment with America after World War II—its selfishness, its infuriating conviction that it alone knew what was right and wrong, its ruthlessness in getting what it wanted and lack of gratitude for the sacrifices of its allies—was felt not just by Filipinos, but by the French, and actively opposed by the Chinese and Vietnamese. India, too, under Nehru, tried to foster an independence and solidarity among nations that sought security and dignity through a policy of non-alignment.

Still, a survey of the generation that fought in and lived through the war will show that for the most part, they preferred alliance with the Western powers, imperialist or neo-imperialist to aiding or abetting fascists. Indeed, in recalling the anniversary of the Leyte Landing, what should be remembered is not just the enthusiasm and relief that greeted the return of American forces, but the reasons for that feeling of liberation. Freedom and the desire for it are never wrong. Thankfulness for those who make it possible is never misplaced. Fond memories of an older generation are not for a younger generation to disparage. For freedom gains strength from itself. It took liberation in 1944-45, for us to realize that freedom is not just given, it is earned. And that once earned, it must be earned again, and again.

Generals handling funds now under suspicion

THE TESTIMONY of Maj. Gen. Carlos F. Garcia before the House committee, during which he repeatedly invoked his right against self-incrimination, sounded so much like the testimony of presidential brother-in-law (and now Rep.) Iggy Arroyo on the Jose Pidil bank deposits, during which he also repeatedly refused to answer questions by invoking his right to privacy. In both hearings, the legislators threw up their hands in exasperation and failed to get any information from their witnesses.

But actions speak louder than words. Why would a witness be afraid to talk and incriminate himself if he isn't guilty of something? An innocent person would only be glad to tell everything he knows to prove his innocence, 'di'ba? But silence is the refuge of the guilty, like the Mafia mobsters.

Again, the House investigation of the former AFP comptroller has turned into a comedy, with the general and his lawyers outwitting the congressmen. They have to find other sources of evidence; they can't get any from the mouth of the accused himself. I think the strategy should be to charge him with unexplained wealth. Make him explain how he acquired all his bank deposits and real estate properties. That would be interesting to hear.

Because of the Garcia scandal, all AFP generals are now under suspicion, especially those who handle funds. One of them is retired Brig. Gen. Jose S. Ramiscal, who is in trouble simply because he is the president of the formerly cash-rich AFP-RSBS. But unlike Garcia who obviously doesn't want to be subjected to any investigation, Ramiscal wants the charges against him to be heard as quickly as possible. It is the prosecution that is dragging its feet. The case has been percolating in the offices of the Ombudsman and the Sandiganbayan for several years already.

The case against Ramiscal is simplicity itself. The AFP-RSBS bought 148 separate parcels of land in Laguna for real estate development back when the market was robust, before the Asian economic crisis. The total area purchased was 964,494 square meters. The total amount paid by the AFP-

THE HERITAGE Foundation's assessment of Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as the weakest leader in Asia Pacific raises some interesting questions about the nature of weakness and strength.

Heritage itself is confused about the concepts. Decades ago, it found Ferdinand Marcos a strong leader, at least when he did not strike the occasional pose of opposing the United States for local nationalist consumption. In fact, Marcos was a weak leader, notwithstanding that he ruled with an iron fist. The weakness did not lie in that his rule was being challenged from inside, by restive military officers, and outside, by the horde howling at the gates. Nor did it lie in that his kidneys were rotting away from lupus. It lay in the very nature of his rule. Dictatorial rule does not a strong leader make. But I'm getting ahead of my story.

GMA herself uses the concept of a "strong republic." Much of it, of course, is just spin, which is the one thing she excels in. She came to Macapagal-Arroyo through the labor of others, and her claim to the throne being tenuous, she needed to project strength and authority. She surrounded herself with the acolytes of them. Not least rhetorically, "strong republic" being a chief phrase.

All this forces us to ask: What are the true properties of strength? What makes for a strong leader?

It helps to see what it is by seeing what it is not.

Strength is not stubbornness or pursuing things with a one-track mind. Strength is not refusing to apologize to a whistle-blower you falsely accuse of being part of the crime she has blown, and compounding the problem by ordering your police chief to make good your mistake. I remember writing several angry columns at the incredible suggestion of GMA's aides that for her to apologize to Acsa Ramirez would be to show weakness and compromise national security. To this day, she hasn't. She has merely said let bygones be bygones.

Strength is not pursuing power with unyielding obsession. It is not making friends of enemies and enemies of friends to win votes. It RSBS was P195,852,513 or an average price of P203 per sq. m. The total amount registered at the register of deeds was P28,226,090, or an average price of only P30 per sq. m. What happened to the difference of P167,626,423?

Conclusion: Ramiscal pocketed it. And because of this, Ramiscal is facing at least 148 cases of estafa which, judging by the number, gives the impression that the general must be a hardened criminal.

It is not that simple, Ramiscal told me. I interviewed the general over dinner at our neighborhood coffee shop one night last week, and he gave me the facts and explained what happened. There is no missing P167 million, he said, and he has not pocketed a single centavo.

The 148 parcels of farmland, he explained, were bought through a "consolidator" or broker. The AFP-RSBS did not negotiate directly with the farmers. This was necessary because if it was known that the RSBS was buying their properties and negotiating separately with each farmer, the asking price would rise progressively higher. It was the job of the consolidator to haggle for as low a price as possible, consolidate all the purchased parcels and then turn them over to the RSBS as one parcel.

The RSBS board of trustees approved an acquisition cost of P225 per sq. m., but the consolidator was free to bargain with the owners for a lower price. The difference between the amount paid by the RSBS and the amount actually received by the owners was the fee, or commission of the consolidator.

From this, the consolidator would pay the capital gains tax and other taxes due, as well as sundry expenses. What is left after this is his profit.

The law allows the consolidator to unilaterally report to the register of deeds the purchase price. The deeds of sale were signed only by the sellers. Neither Ramiscal nor the RSBS had any part in this.

Based on the findings of Special Prosecutor Dennis Vilta-Ignacio in his June 15, 2004 memorandum to the Ombudsman, the average amount actually received by the sellers from the consolidator was P150 per sq. m. But the consolidator registered an average price of only P30 per sq. m. for a total price of P28,226,090 obviously to lower the capital gains tax. This is falsification of public documents for which the consolidator is liable, but not the RSBS or Ramiscal, the latter said.

The acquisition price approved by the board of trustees was P225 per sq. m. but the RSBS paid only an average price of P203 per sq. m., so Ramiscal saved it P22 per sq. m. or a total of P21,218,868.

Since the amount acknowledged to have been received by the sellers from the consolidator was P150 per sq. m. (not only P30 per sq. m. as reported to the register of deeds) and the total area bought was 964,494 sq. m., it logically follows that the amount received by the sellers from the consolidator was P144,674,100.

If the amount paid by the RSBS to the sellers through the consolidator was P195,852,513 and the amount acknowledged by the sellers to have been actually received from the consolidator was P144,674,100, we are looking at a difference of P51,178,413 which possibly went to pay for the capital gains tax, documentary stamp tax, tenants' disturbance fee and consolidator's fee as stipulated in the memorandum of understanding between the RSBS and the consolidator.

There is no "missing" P167 million.

As for the 148 estafa cases against Ramiscal, it is because each deed of sale was counted as one case. Technically, there are 148 counts of only one case.

Still, strength is not transforming the one body tasked with ensuring clean elections into the one agency engineered for cheating. It is not ransacking the public treasury to buy an election. Strangely, I have heard people express admiration for this unscrupulous doggedness and describe it as strength. In fact, it is mere pettiness, one with disastrous consequences for the nation. Marcos showed that kind of doggedness, too, and look where it led us.

Strength is first of all strength of character. And strength of character is above all being able to admit mistakes and knowing when enough is enough. It is the ability to look power in the face and shun it. True strength, as "The Lord of the Rings" suggests, is not having the boldness to wear the ring of power and corrupting oneself. It is having the courage to throw the ring into the fires of hell and freeing oneself. As far as that goes, my hat's off to Cory Aquino who had the courage to say no to a second term notwithstanding that it was hers for the taking. That is strength.

Strength is not a martial posture or predilection for war. Strength is not blindly following a superpower into thrashing about after being wounded and turning gun-ho for arms and war. A posture that can't be lived up to anyway, as GMA's sudden retreat in the face of Angelo de la Cruz's kidnapping shows. The Heritage Foundation's view of GMA as a strong leader during the height of her "war against terror" is an ironic one. The strength is an illusion, though one shared by her civilian and military aides, who gloated at the surplus war planes that came their way and struck macho poses in the group picture. The only strong thing in all this was the odor it emitted. Strength is morality, not pugnacity. Strength is reason, not brute force. Strength is the principle "right is might" and not "might is right." The real strength here, as in the United States, was shown by those who refused to be cowed into submission by the mob that howled in the streets and a government that led them on to a lynching. The real strength lay among those who asked why we were doing this and not among those who merely answered that that was what everybody else was doing.

And finally strength is not tyranny. That is the most dangerous illusion of all, the notion that authoritarianism, iron-fisted rule, dictatorship represents strength. "Strongman" is a misnomer, as is "strong republic." A strongman (or woman) is not a strong leader, he is a weak one. A "strong republic" is not a strong political order, it is a weak one. A strong leader does not impose her will on her people, she imposes the will of her people on her. A strong leader does not screw human rights and civil liberties to defend her nation's freedom, a strong leader defends human rights and civil liberties as the very essence of her nation's freedom.

The bigger and more dangerous illusion there is that democracy is a weak system and authoritarianism a strong one. The opposite is true. Democracy is the strongest system of all because it rests on a strong people. The aim of democracy is to make a strong people, not a strong government. The truth of democracy is that a republic is only as strong as its citizens. You can destroy a strong government, you can't destroy a strong people.

Democracy is not unlike the strongest profession of all, which is teaching. The best teacher is not the one who makes himself indispensable, who will always be there to guide his pupil along. The best teacher is the one who makes himself superfluous, who makes his pupil learn enough to go his own way someday.

GMA is the weakest leader in all of Asia Pacific today. But that is so for reasons the Heritage Foundation will never understand.

OPINION

It looked so simple

IT looked so simple at the start, back in the late 1980s. I had begun saying Mass at Payatas-by-the-Dumpsite in 1985, and quickly had become aware not only of the miserable living conditions of the people but specifically of the problem of malnutrition among children, which was often severe enough to be brain-threatening and life-threatening.

So we started a milk-feeding program for third-degree malnourished infants, with money coming from Loyola House of Studies and a few friends, while the weighing of children and distribution of the milk-powder was handled by "Celing," a local volunteer and mother of four. We hardly realized how one little thing would lead to another, into all the pain and complexity of a slum community, and how many dimensions there are to growth itself.

The first crisis came when Celing, who had become the very heart of the feeding program, decided that she should go to Kuala Lumpur as a domestic helper, in order to pay for the education of her children. When I expressed my concern at what this would do to the program, a generous friend offered to provide monthly allowance, more or less equivalent to what Celing believed she would be able to send home from KL. I told her the good news before Midnight Mass on Christmas. Tears came to her eyes and she said, "This is the happiest Christmas of my life." Since then she has gone on to become not only well-informed on infant nutrition but a paramedic and an all-purpose social worker in the community, assisting in the clinics, getting people into hospitals and watching by them at night, bringing in doctors from the Department of Health when there is an outbreak of cholera, being called to intervene in cases of child abuse, rape and incest in the community.

In her most recent report, Celing was particularly concerned about four problem families: two of them abandoned by their fathers, one in which the mother was reacting to abuse from her drug-dependent husband by beating her children cruelly.

one in which the woman had given birth prematurely due to her drunken husband and a neighbor quarreling in the house. One of the abandoned families we have been able to send back to the province; the other is more difficult as the 24-year-old mother is into drugs, refuses to go for rehabilitation or to give up the children, and cries about her problems in prayer-group sessions.

Celing keeps on walking the dusty and muddy paths of Payatas although she has had heart surgery and a couple of small strokes. She speaks of having grown with the experience and the challenges. Having a wayward husband herself, she can relate to other women with family problems. And her children have been inspired by her example: one is a nutritionist, one a social worker, and one the key trainer in our natural family planning program.

As word of our feeding program got around, contributions began coming in from people we had never met, or knew only slightly. Then one contributor specified that her contribution should go to education, and so willy-nilly we found ourselves giving scholarships. The first went to Juliet, a bright young woman who was working at a dead-end occupation as a high-speed sewer in a sweatshop. We sent her for training as a computer programmer. She started out as a bookkeeper in a small fast-food firm and now is chief of operations of the firm, a leader in the parish community, stretching her thin resources to pay for the education of her six younger siblings. Four others whom we sent for a program in electro-mechanics are now airplane mechanics for Lufthansa. In these days 32 more will graduate from vocational courses with the Don Bosco Fathers and Sisters. The morale and enthusiasm of these young people are contagious and we pray that they will find steady jobs.

Over time we realized that the burden of more children than they could provide for adequately was blighting the lives not only of many families but of the children themselves. So we initiated a natural family planning program, "riding on" the feeding program since the mothers of these malnourished infants appeared to be a natural target. Celing's daughter Jenny, now heads it. The response is very good, with about 100 couples practicing the Billings method and others waiting to be instructed.

Within the past year, Sister "Letty" R.M., with experience in community-based health and basic ecclesial community work, has joined us, and her Bible-study and prayer groups are multiplying. Again they "ride" partly on the feeding program, and so reach many women who are not churchgoers, as well as some members of other faiths. These women appreciate the sessions, and find not only a sense of closeness to God but also support and comfort in their troubles from their fellow members. The members of one group contribute P5 each week to a common fund, which they use to help those in particular difficulties.

In recent months, Doctor "Tex," a medical doctor and Jesuit scholastic, and Doctor "Ion," who is considering entering the Jesuits, have been helping in the clinic at Payatas built and managed by Sister Dominic, OSA. They find themselves overwhelmed by the demand, and depressed by the extent of malnutrition, active tuberculosis and primary complex which they find—all indications that the basic problem of poverty has by no means been resolved.

All in all this is costing more than P100,000 a month. Though we have a certain backlog due to a large donation in the past, we are eating into it at an alarming rate. Additional help is always welcome, at the Institute on Church and Social Issues, Ateneo de Manila Campus or P.O. Box 250, UP Post Office, Quezon City.

On the same day, from 3-8 p.m., TOWNS will observe "Child to Child Peace Day" which will bring children from the former conflict-ridden areas of Central Mindanao to interact with children from Metro Manila. The project, which began since the fighting broke out last year, is coordinated by Dr. June Lopez, TOWNS 1989 for psychiatry.

A symposium on ecological waste management, coordinated by Clirita Aganon, TOWNS 2001 for government service, will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 26 at the Central Luzon State University in Muñoz, Nueva Ecija. On the same day, Queenie Lee-Chua, TOWNS 2001 for education, will be hosting a Math Games and Puzzles session with students of the Ramon Magsaysay High School on Espana, Manila.

Chief Justice Hilario Davide, who was invited to address the gathering, wrote explaining that the memorial Mass and service coincided with an en banc session of the Supreme Court. He did, however, send lawyer Evelyn Dumadum, an officer of the Court, who knew Arbet personally and worked with her on many projects in Cebu, to represent him that morning.

The memorial service would not have been possible, either, without the support of so many friends: Fr. HIGHLIGHT of the week-long celebration is the TOWNS Awards Ceremony honoring the latest batch of awardees, to be held at 3 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 28 in Malacañang, with no less than the President handing out the awards.

The latest "TOWNSwomen" are: Alicia Rita Morales Arroyo for business, Joi Barrios for arts, Madonna Carbon Casimero for science and technology, Ces Orefia Drilon for journalism, Raquel del Rosario Fortun for medicine, Cathy Babao Guballa for public service/children's health care advocacy, Chun-chin Arnaldo for environment protection, Marichu Lazebino for law, Aura Castillo Matias for industrial engineering, Deanie Lyn Ocampo for early childhood education, Dina Sandico Ong for arts/fashion, and Blessilda Perez Raposa for education.

MacArthur's account of Leyte landing of a Japanese machine gun seemingly not more than 100 yards from the shoreline. The smoke from the burning palm trees was in our nostrils, and we could hear the continual snapping and crackling of flames. The gunner dropped the ramp about 50 yards from shore, and we waded in. It took me only 30 or 40 long strides to reach dry land, but that was one of the most meaningful walks I ever took. When it was done, and I stood on the sand, I knew I was back again—against my old enemies of Bataan, for there, shining on the bodies of dead Japanese soldiers, I saw the insignia of the 16th Division, General Homma's ace unit."

On shore he stood before a broadcasting unit and in the rain said:

"People of the Philippines: I have returned. By the grace of Almighty God our forces stand again on Philippine soil—soil consecrated in the blood of our two peoples. We have come, dedicated and committed to the task of destroying every vestige of enemy control over your daily lives, and of restoring upon a foundation of indestructible strength, the liberties of your people."

When read in a book today, the words seem melodramatic or even corny, but one cannot deny the hope these same words inspired among Filipinos tired of the Japanese and wishing for freedom once more.

MacArthur ended his speech by saying:

"Rally to me. Let the indomitable spirit of Bataan and Corregidor lead on... Strike at every available opportunity. For your homes and hearths, strike! For future generations of your sons and daughters, strike! In the name of your sacred dead, strike! Let no heart be faint. Let every arm be steeled. The Guidance of Divine God points the way. Follow His name to the Holy Grail of righteous victory."

It is not enough to remember the end of the war. Let us hope that we never have to endure war again."

Outsourcing: boon or bane? (1)

ABOUT two or three years ago, I first wrote about the potentials of cashing in on the needs of US companies for software development, which they had started contracting out (thus the term "outsourcing") to Third World countries, mainly India, the Philippines and China.

While I knew outsourcing was going to grow rapidly, I didn't realize it would do so at such a rapid pace, and that besides software development, the explosion would cover areas such as call centers. Today, there are some 8,000 Filipino firms engaged in outsourcing activities.

No doubt, there are many potential benefits in outsourcing, but if we are to maximize the gains, we should understand how outsourcing came about in relation to global capitalism, its advantages and disadvantages, and where we are today in this global market. It's also important that we look at the situation soberly, separating the hype from realities.

To do this, I checked different Internet sites but I will be mainly using figures from the Internet site of Offshoring Digest, which examines trends and prospects in outsourcing.

Call centers and software development

Call centers account for the biggest chunk of outsourcing revenues in the Philippines. The call centers are actually customer service units, the "operators" responding to questions from consumers. Thus, someone living in the States and who has encountered difficulties operating a new MP3 player from an American multinational can call a toll-free number to get advice. What the US-based customer may not know is that the customer service representative, speaking with a mild "foreign" accent, is actually based in Manila.

In 2003, there were 20,000 "seats" (job positions) generated by Philippine-based call center firms, and that number was projected to double in 2004. Total revenues were said to have reached some $200 million in 2003. Some P10 billion has been invested to set up over 60 call center firms.

I could not find revenue figures for the other outsourcing segments, but I suspect software development comes in a close second to call centers. Offshoring Digest says there are some 10,000 software developers in the country, about 10 percent of our total number of IT professionals. These developers work for some 200 firms.

Medical transcriptions and animation

Less known than call centers and software development is the market for medical transcriptions, which involves medical reports, discharge summaries, therapy and rehabilitation notes, chart notes and other clinical reports. Under US laws, a doctor or a medical institution will not be paid their fees unless they have filed full medical reports, mainly documenting doctor-patient interactions. Doctors routinely tape their observations, which then have to be transcribed.

There are about 20 medical transcription firms in the Philippines. I could not find total revenue figures for these firms, but Offshoring Digest says that one firm alone, Philippine IT Offshore Network (Piton), had a $2.5 million contract with Health Partners, a US health maintenance organization. Under the contract, Piton will provide some 100,000 lines of medical transcription per day, to increase to 250,000 to 350,000 lines within the first year of the contract.

What human resources are required here? Apparently, a good transcription worker can provide up to 1,000 lines per day at a 98 percent average accuracy rate. They need to be able to provide transcripts within 24 hours; for emergency cases, the output has to be delivered within three to six hours. It's intensive work, and requires a familiarity with English medical terms.

We move now to animation production, which involves a handful of firms. Filipinos mainly do two-dimensional (2D) animation, the more traditional drawing and painting such as what we see with many Walt Disney classics. We've started to compete for the market for 3D animation, which includes computer-generated images, but the high cost of software for such production has limited local firms from getting its share of the market.

Runaway factories

Outsourcing has many exciting potentials, but let's not forget that all these new industries only represent the latest phase in global capitalism.

Labor costs in the United States and other developed countries have always been much higher than in Third World countries, which is one reason we keep losing so many Filipinos seeking greener pastures in countries like the United States, Canada and Australia.

Business people are always looking for ways to maximize profits, mainly by keeping production costs, especially labor, as low as possible. Using cheap migrant labor still comes out expensive, so in the 1970s, we saw the phenomenon of "runaway factories," where American multinationals began setting up shop in Third World countries to take advantage of the lower labor costs. It started with factories across the United States' southern border, in Mexico, but eventually spread to other countries. The Philippines was one of the countries that hosted these factories, mainly those producing garments and electronic components.

The development of information technologies in the last 30 years introduced new opportunities for global capitalism. We plunged into an information revolution, with businesses discovering that profits were to be made not just in the production of material goods but also in the packaging and dissemination of knowledge and information.

Outsourcing was inevitable as the rapid and efficient flow of information and knowledge became more and more important. Note that some aspects of this flow of information and knowledge are part of a continuum of earlier global capitalism. The call centers, for example, are there to provide customer support for products which, although sold by an American multinational, were probably assembled in China, with parts from the Philippines, Mexico and Malaysia.

Note, too, that there's a whole "generic" field of business process outsourcing (BPO), where a US-based firm will contract a Third World group to handle all kinds of information and data tasks. Outsourcing Digest reports that there are 53 registered BPO operators in the Philippines handling "business data processing, database management, finance and accounting services, insurance claims processing, logistics management, human resource administration, and sales and marketing."

In so many words then, there's more to outsourcing than call centers, software development, animation and software development. On Friday, let's see how we can use all this information to maximize the benefits that we might want to reap from outsourcing.

A symbol of tragedy

NATIONAL artist Napoleon Abueva asks "Is there hope for the return of the Balangiga Bells?" (PDI, 10/06/04) Having researched on the Balangiga incident and the bells issue for a decade, and being familiar with both sides of the debate, I can assure him that there is reason for hope—if the focus is on peace, reconciliation and healing, not on dredging up the hatred in a war of long ago to serve an anti-

American agenda. Had I been an American veteran in 1998 (I am British), and subjected to propaganda attacks, I, too, would have resisted the return of the bells. As Mayor Catalino Camenforte of Balangiga says "It's past." Balangiga sees the incident as the tragedy it was.

Abueva's fine memorial also implicitly treats it as a tragedy in commemorating all those who fell that day. Over the years, the Balangiga bells have been used and abused for too many political and personal agendas by people who ignored the wishes, desires and opinions of the Balangiganons themselves. I believe it is time to empower Balangiga to seek the return of the bells.

Meralco-IPP rates artificially high

THE LETTER of Meralco's Elpi Cuna (PDI, 9/11/04) for me, carried deceptive undertones. If unchallenged, the public might be misled. Having regularly attended the Energy Regulatory Commission hearings lately, I came to know of relevant data that disprove Cuna's allegations.

Aside from determining the true cost of power, we should identify the true beneficiary of high power costs.

First Gas Power, an independent power producer described by Cuna as "Meralco-affiliated," is majority-owned by the Lopezes.

Meralco is presently under the management of the Lopezes, who are the majority shareholders of the company, whose biggest bloc of shares is held by the Philippine government.

Meralco procures excess and expensive electricity from First Gas Power, leading to Meralco's high generation pass-on cost. For instance, First Gas Provisional Invoice No. 0106-01014 (May 21, 2001 to June 25, 2001) shows a net electrical output of 17,244,000 kWh, for which First Gas billed Meralco P1,116,243,121.31; or the equivalent of P64.75/kWh. This is just one of several documents submitted by Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile to the ERC.

Cuna argues that the power rate of the National Power Corp. is "artificially low" because of the P0.40/kWh-ep on the PPA (purchased power adjustment). While that may be true, it is not an excuse not to buy from Napocor. While the savings are arguably illusory, the loss and added costs from the expensive Lopez independent power producer (IPP) are very real.

Besides, in 2001, the Napocor, Philpodeco and Duracom rates were almost the same, with Duracom pegged to 95 percent of Napocor; but again, indications of over-recovery in 2000-2001 were evident. Clearly, it was the First Gas and Quezon Power rates that were artificially high. Duracom is also Lopez-affiliated.

Meralco protests at being compared with other Napocor-served distribution utilities. The comparison precisely shows that if Meralco bought all its power requirements from Napocor, our rates will not be high.

Meralco did in fact walk away from its Napocor obligations. The settlement agreement and mediation Cuna cites are precisely the outcome of that walkaway and simply set the penalty Napocor must pay Napocor.

As to Meralco's claim that the rules were changed retroactively when ordered to refund P30 billion, the Supreme Court merely recognized and reiterated the long-standing rule limiting the recovery of costs by utilities to what is prudent, reasonable and necessary, which until then had been ignored by Meralco and tolerated by the ERC.

On the provisional increase reversed by the Supreme Court, if Cuna sat through the 13-hour marathon hearings, he would have known that the Court's ruling was more than just "for reasons of incomplete publication." It was about all the things that the ERC has failed to do to protect consumer interests in the regulatory hearings.

Go after corrupt customs officials

I JUST want to express my reaction to your editorial, "Shame game." (PDI, 10/7/04) The government should start to walk the talk. It has made so many promises to the Filipino people, but the only sure thing happening to our country this far is its continuing economic and moral decline. If its announcement about rounding up the big smugglers and corrupt customs officials was meant sincerely, that would have been a good start; but it still needs to be proven. I hope this won't be another stage show of the current administration to earn brownie points.

I have personally seen how these corrupt customs officials transact their dirty business by asking for "cuts" or "lagay" from businessmen and, mind you, they do this up front and in the open. Just how corrupt are these customs officials? Well, one customs official was able to buy a HUMMER ver. 2 vehicle (yes, those really expensive SUVs) and he even has the rashness to display his ID on the windshield. How could a regular customs official with a "normal" salary afford such an expensive car legally?

I know of some rich people who could only dream of owning such a vehicle. I hope the current administration would mean what it says and go after those corrupt officials.

Greenhills residents not one in anti-mosque campaign

I WOULD like to thank the Inquirer for its enlightened and balanced editorial, and for the well-written column, "Chance to pray," of Manuel Quezon III. (PDI, 10/11/04)

There is no truth that with the new Muslim prayer area, Muslims from other areas will converge on Greenhills and cause serious peace and order problems. Muslims from Quapo, Taguig, Commonwealth, Mindanao, the Middle East and Turkey already pray at our Muslim prayer area on Fridays, and there has been no increase in the area's crime statistics.

Our family is an example of diversity, showing that Christians and Muslims, in spite of occasional arguments and disagreements, can still live peacefully together even under one roof. All it took was a little understanding and dialogue to get to know, and not to fear the so-called "other." Those opposing the establishment of a Muslim prayer area in Greenhills do not have the full support of all Greenhills residents. Their campaign of bigotry, which panders to unfounded fears, was launched without consulting the residents. I was surprised to receive a few Saturdays ago, at my Greenhills home, a newsletter full of insults and inaccuracies from a so-called Federation of Greenhills Associations.

Indeed, by building a prayer room for Muslims, Ortigas & Co is catering to a need of Muslim Filipinos who, like their Catholic counterparts, are religious by nature. The company has already built a small chapel worth P15 million where the Catholic faithful may worship at Mass ev-

Baguio artist promotes folk art through terracotta sculpture

By Frank Climat
Baguio City

STABBED by nostalgia in the land of jalapeños, Baguio-based artist Roberto "Bob" Acosta in 2001 decided to take a lump of clay and mold it into a Kalinga woman.

Taking nostalgia into its deeper meaning, which is "finding comfort in stimuli evocative of the past," Acosta gouged out a circle where her heart should have been. He etched Cordillera motifs around the circle and gave her shawl the red color of jalapeño peppers and the betel nut back home.

If you peer into the hole, you would see a small bul'ol or rice granary guardian.

When the Kalinga woman came out of the kiln of the artist's studio in Universidad Veracruzana (UVC) in Xalapa, Mexico, Acosta found his calling.

Under the tutelage of Maestro Javier Perilli of UVC, Acosta learned more about terracotta sculpture. It also helped that the anthropological museum in Xalapa had those massive Olmec heads.

Did you watch "Legends of the Hidden Temple" on Nickelodeon with that huge talking rock face named Olmec? The biggest Olmec head in Xalapa is eight feet high.

Acosta was also intrigued by the moche pottery of Peru. An ancient culture there known as Mochica left a trove of pottery like ceramic vessels and bottles in the form of men, women, animals and deities. Other moche pottery has line drawings of their war exploits on the side of the jars.

Democratization

With his Kalinga woman with the bul'ol heart, Acosta came back from his eight-month stay in UVC in March 2002 with a new vision/mission: "The democratization of art, that is, to break away from its present elitist form and to work toward more appreciation for folk art through terracotta sculpture."

Since his return to the University of the Philippines Baguio where he teaches fine arts, Acosta has made about 50 terracotta pieces.

Almost all of Acosta's works depict peasants. "Many of them are my memories of the Ibaloi women I met from my trek to Mt. Puag," he said.

His works are not merely anthropological. Their tattoos play with the character. Their clothes are like Joseph's magical coat, telling a story about how Acosta got to meet them.

This, he said, was influenced by Baguio-based painter Leonard Agumaldo and Beatrix Aurora of Chiapas state in Mexico, artists who portrayed epics in their paintings.

Etched on the chest of his "Kapre" is a bailete tree. On the side of an Ifugao woman is Acosta mountain-biking along the rice terraces. Cordillera symbols jump out of Acosta's works, literally, like the small frog, symbolizing fertility, held up by an Ibaloi woman.

Smiling children peek out from their slings behind their mother. A woman wears a dress which has the favorite text message among Baguio residents—Ania ngay (What now?)—written on it.

His most popular work is the Lady of Guadalupe, also known as the miraculous Our Lady of Heaven, who appeared more than 400 years ago to an Indian peasant in Mexico City and is known for her veil of stars and the rays emanating from all around her body.

'Cordillerafied'

In the commissions of Guadalupe, Acosta had her "Cordillerafied" in his own vision, giving her a Filipino nose and a veil from various Cordillera tales.

During the last Holy Week, he watched "The Passion of The Christ" in Baguio and compared it to how festive the city was during that solemn time.

He created a morose Christ with thorns on his back and eight happy men, women and children apparently illustrating the seven deadly sins.

Surprisingly, it doesn't have the pathos one would expect from an Ang Kukok, but it is still reminiscent of how Filipinos make fiestas of everything sad that happens to them.

When he started working with terracotta, Acosta went to Balbalasang in Kalinga and Sagada in Mt. Province to meet with the potters there and examine their clay.

"I dug at their source," Acosta said.

He decided that the clay from Vigan City in Ilocos Sur and La Union was the most suitable for his works. Vigan clay is the most durable, much needed by the intricate figures of Acosta.

He also uses engobe or colored slips of clay, which he buys in La Union. The black, white, red, yellow, tan and brown engobe accentuate his figures.

Working in his studio in UP Baguio, he churns out about 10 at a time before having them fired in the gas kiln of his friend Jeff Van Der Broek in Baguio.

Acosta does about two firings a year.

Last year Acosta was included with Eanelle Abueva, Jecky Alano, Ugu Bagan, Charito Bintang, Alan Cabalfin, Peter Cortes, Aba Dalena, Jaime de Guzman, Fidel Go, Julie Lluch, Bady Mendoza, Hadrian Mendoza, Shozo Michikawa, Jon and Tess Pettyjohn, Nelfa Querubin-Tompkins, Lia Tayag and Van Der Broek in "Putik," featuring 100 works of these clay sculptors.

Acosta said he first felt out of place among some of these sculptors who had been kneading clay for decades, but his inclusion was enough assurance that he was doing something exemplary.

There was no clue to Acosta's artistic evolution that he would shift his medium to clay, unless one includes swimming in a carabao hole in his hometown of Solano in Nueva Vizcaya.

Acosta cannot recall not sketching or dreaming to become a basketball star. He graduated from the UP College of Fine Arts in 1980 and then took up Bachelor of Arts in Landscape Architecture, also in UP where he graduated in 1987. He worked as a landscape architect for Kolkowitz, Kuske and Grove in the United States from 1987 to 1990.

He returned to teach in UP Baguio in 1991 and has stayed there since.

Sometimes he can be a vocal critic of Baguio politicians and subdivision developers bent on "concretizing" the city. He said there were ways to blend houses and structures with the landscape without sacrificing pine trees.

First love

Painting has been his first love and for his dissertation, he drew the different moods of Mt. Pulag in "Mountains and Rivers Without End," inspired by a passage from a Gary Snyder poem.

He also had an exhibit with the Baguio Arts Guild of vendors and ordinary men playing Brick Game and other ways to while the time.

A health buff, Acosta spends most of his time hiking, mountain biking, reading Latin American poetry and novels, eating beans and drinking Cerveza Negra.

But let him near a lump of clay and you have captured his attention.

"It is very accessible, organic, plastic, malleable. It is very primal, primitive and close to earth," he said, describing clay and maybe himself.

Anti-gambling radioman murdered

By Bert Pacate
PDI Mindanao Bureau

TANDAG, Surigao del Sur—On Monday, Eddy Sablas delivered his last on air report from the Tandag police station.

During the past days, Sablas, co-host of the radio program "Singgit sa mga Lunsuran" (Cry of the townspeople) over dxJRFM, had been talking about last two gambling operations in many towns of the province and the proliferation of drugs, naming and warning suspected drug lords to stop their illegal activities.

It was also on the same day that an iron Gov. Vicente Pimentel phoned the radio station and lambasted Sablas for allegedly mentioning his name in connection with his alleged illegal activities such as receiving bribe from drug traffickers, gambling operators and illegal loggers.

On Tuesday morning, barely 24 hours after the governor's phone call, Sablas, 30, lay dead inside a tricycle, which he boarded after buying something from Ultra Marketing, a department store along the busy national highway here.

A lone gunman shot him three times in the head and in the body, using a 45 cal. pistol, around 10 a.m.

Police said the gunman walked behind the slow-moving vehicle from the department store.

Tandag police Chief Insp. Arnil Bakil said they have no suspect yet although the police were following up several leads.

Lucup said he hopes the Sablas murder would not end up unsolved like what happened to the Ramirez case and most cases of attacks against journalists.

Inday Varona, chair of the National Union of Journalists in the Philippines, told the Inquirer that it was likely Sablas was killed due to his stance against drugs and illegal gambling in Surigao del Sur.

Varona said it was also possible that politicians who became objects of Sablas' criticisms were behind his death.

She described the killing of the journalist and other media practitioners in the country as manifestation of "breakdown of the justice system."

"They (perpetrators) want to impress on everyone that they can really shoot just anybody. These are the people who want to silence the justice system in the Philippines," she said.

Sablas was the third journalist killed in Mindanao this year and the 8th for the Philippines. With reports from Dennis Jay Santos and Franklin Caliguid, PDI Mindanao Bureau

How old is your heart?

A 26-year old can have a heart age of a 40-year old, while a 59-year old can have a heart age of someone half his age. Simply put, young doesn't always equate to being healthy.

To find out if you have a heart older than you actually are, check those which apply to you:

FAMILY HISTORY - Those who have male relatives below 55 and female family members below 65 who have had heart attacks are genetically susceptible to strokes or coronary heart diseases.

- BLOOD PRESSURE - 140/90 mmHg or above confirms hypertension.
- SMOKING
- DIABETES - Those who are afflicted with types I and II diabetes for 15 years or more have increased cardiac risk.
- CHOLESTEROL - A reading of 200mg/dL (6.2 mmol/L) or above is a dangerously high level.

- LIFESTYLE - Sedentary individuals are more prone to high blood pressure, high cholesterol and type II diabetes.

A check on any of the above means that your heart is at risk of being older than your chronological age.

26...36...49...57...

To lower the risk of premature heart aging, do the following:

EXERCISE - Follow a regular exercise program.

TAKE VITAMIN SUPPLEMENTS -

Vitamin E is a powerful antioxidant that works against free radicals.

Poor get 'free' cards

LUCENA CITY—In support of President Macapagal-Arroyo's preferential treatment for the poorest of the poor, Mayor Ramon Taiga Jr. distributed "Serbis B" Program Cards to at least 1,300 poor families here last week. The cards would serve as the recipients' ID card for quick access to different local government agencies in charge of providing free basic services to the needy like medical, legal, burial, livelihood, education, travel and other social benefits. Taiga ordered all local government agencies to provide "immediate and no-questions-asked" assistance to all cardholders. Delfin Mallari Jr., PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

Vigilantes kill 2

DAVAO CITY—Suspected vigilante gunmen struck anew after nearly a month of hiatus and killed at least two persons here within a 24-hour period. On Wednesday morning, the nearly decapitated body of an unidentified victim was found dumped near the Sto. Niño Shrine Hills in Barangay Matina. Police found a handwritten letter that read: "Ako ay serial rapist. Huwag tulungan (I am a serial rapist. Do not emulate). On Tuesday midnight, a suspected vigilante hit man shot to death a 23-year-old female nursing student while wounding another inside a videoke bar along Camus Street in the downtown area. Analie del Carpio, a resident of Sotanega Subdivision, died of shots in the head and body. Her companion, Carlo Rivera, 22, of Margarita Village in Barangay Bajada, was rushed to the hospital. Police said the suspect fled on a motorcycle.

Family shot to death

ZAMBOANGA CITY—A family of three, including a nine-month-old baby, was shot to death inside their home in Barangay Polo, Olutanga in Zamboanga Sibugay on Friday night. Chief Supt. Virgil Querol, police chief for Western Mindanao, identified the victims as Ibrahim Asimudin, his wife Salma and their nine-month-old baby Edsmer. The family was sleeping when unidentified suspects barged inside their home and started firing, Querol said. Police could still not say the motive behind the killing. Seedlings for trees

CITY OF MALOLOS—The city government has replaced the 70 trees cut along the MacArthur Highway here with 2,100 nipa and mahogany seedlings. The seedlings were turned over by the city government to the Department of Environment and Natural Resources in exchange for the trees cut for the rehabilitation and widening of the highway. Raven Ramos, city tourism officer, said the replacement seedlings came from the local government nursery in Barangay Mambo. Mayor Danilo Domingo said they cut the trees to construct an alternative route to the North Luzon Expressway. Carmela Reyes, PDI Central Luzon Desk

2 rebels charged

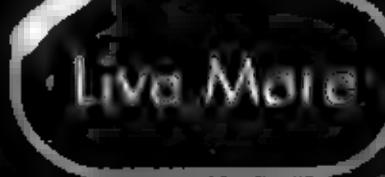

CAMP MELCHOR DE LA CRUZ, Isabela—Two suspected New People's Army rebels were charged with illegal possession of firearms before the Isabela prosecutor's office after they were arrested in an encounter in Barangay Dicarnay Dos in Jones town. Lt. Col. Roger Medelodog, 5th Infantry Division assistant chief of staff for civil-military operations, said the suspected rebels were identified as Rolando Butwagan, 28, alias Ka Ched of Maddela, Quirino, and Marlon Aglubub, 32, alias Ka Mike of San Mariano, Isabela. Two unlicensed guns were seized from them, Medelodog said. He said the two rebels claimed they were members of the NPA's Southern Front operating in Jones, San Guillermo and Ecuapun towns in Isabela and Maddela in Quirino. Ilocos councilor slain

BURGOS, Ilocos Sur—A town councilor was shot and killed in Barangay Ambupat here on Sunday night. Councilor Delfin Escobar, 62, who was serving his second term, was checking his patrol spread out for drying on a basketball court when two men wearing ski masks and armed with an M-16 Armaite rifle shot him. Escobar died instantly. The victim's son, Delfin Jr., claimed that politics or a personal grudge could be behind the killing. The slain councilor, a first cousin of Mayor Nathaniel Escobar, was a member of the local opposition. Leoncio Balbin Jr., PDI Northern Luzon Bureau

1,000 farmers, workers protesting Cavite land conversion dispersed

TRECE MARTIRES CITY—More than 1,000 militant farmers and workers calling for the immediate ouster of Gov. Irene "Ayong" Maliki were dispersed with water cannons as they stormed the provincial capitol building here Monday.

No one was reported hurt during the altercation between protesters and the police.

The protesters, who came from different towns of the province, denounced Maliki for his policies that allegedly allowed rampant land conversion in the province and the proliferation of the "no union, no strike policy" inside Cavite's industrial zones.

They formed a human chain and positioned themselves in front of the capitol building as early as 9 a.m.

Renato Alvarez, chair of Kamagsasaka-Ka, a farmers' organization in Cavite, said Maliki's decision to allow big real estate corporations to "illegally" convert agricultural lands into residential and commercial use "killed" local farmers and their livelihood.

"We are fed with Maliki's promises. He is killing us slowly. Three years of hardships under his leadership is more than enough for us. He simply has to go," Alvarez said.

He said since Maliki took over the leadership of the province, almost half of Cavite farmlands devoted to rice, coffee and other crops were transformed into subdivisions, industrial en-claves and commercial areas.

The INQUIRER tried to get the reaction of Maliki but he refused to answer numerous calls on his mobile phone.

Instead, Vice Gov. Johnnie Remulla and some members of the provincial council met with the leaders of the protesters in a dialogue.

Alvarez said the governor had favored moneyed investors who are being accused of grabbing land from small farmers.

He also asked Maliki to help them in their call for the immediate removal of the composite units of the Philippine Marines and the Philippine Air Force in Maragondon.

He said the government troops had been sowing terror among residents in the upland communities.

The farmers then raised their call for a P15 increase in paddy prices and brought dried coffee trees to dramatize the supposed demeaning status of coffee farmers in Cavite.

Alvarez's group was joined by members and supporters of the Solidarity of Cavite Workers and the Bagong Alyansang Makabayan-Cavite who also slammed Maliki for failing to protect the rights of workers employed inside the industrial zones.

Some residents and employees of the provincial capitol likewise joined the protesters as they denounced the alleged compromise agreement that Maliki entered into on a contested 26-hectare lot owned by the Cavite government.

The lot is located at the heart of this city and is being occupied by thousands of residents and several government offices, including the capitol and the city hall.

In a related development, farmers in Southern Tagalog continued to hold simultaneous actions to express their discontent over continued government neglect of agriculture, increases in petroleum and consumer prices, and the resulting widespread hunger among their families, a militant peasant group leader said yesterday.

"The army of landless farm workers is growing at an alarming rate as thousands of small farmers and their families are disenfranchised and robbed of their right over the land," Guillermo Bautista, chair of the Katipunan ng mga Samahang Magbubulut sa Timog Katagalugan, said in a phone interview.

According to Bautista, seven out of 10 farmers now are landless farm workers. With a report from Marlon Ramos and Delfin Mallari Jr., PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

US-trained soldiers sent to hunt NPAs in Mindanao areas

ZAMBOANGA CITY—Southern Command chief Maj. Gen. Generoso Senga ordered the deployment of US-trained troops to north and southeastern Mindanao because of the alleged increase in the activities of communist rebels in the regions.

Senga said the US-trained soldiers, whose exact number he did not specify, would join other troops being re-deployed to the said regions.

"The communists are becoming aggressive and bolder in their attacks and we want to add muscle to the current forces in the area to maintain the military's momentum against them," Senga said on Monday.

More than 10 communist rebels have been killed in recent days in the regions because of clashes with soldiers.

On Oct. 3, heavily armed New People's Army guerrillas ambushed and killed at least four police officers in Baganga, Davao Oriental.

Prior to the encounter, Army troops killed nine rebels during a raid in Pantukan, Compostela Valley.

Senga said despite becoming more aggressive, the NPA was not increasing in number.

"We need to sustain our gains and it is imperative that we also maintain the momentum in doubling up our efforts by adopting new strategies to fight (them)," he said.

Senga said the areas identified for redeployment were Compostela Valley, the Agusan provinces, the Surigao provinces and some areas of North Cotabato.

In Davao City, a rightist group alleged that the NPA was plotting to "liquidate" four ranking military officials in Southern Mindanao.

Pastor Alcover, national chair of the Alliance for National Democracy (ANAD), said NPA rebels headed by Leonardo Pitao alias Commander Parago would carry out the supposed liquidation.

Alcover, a former rebel leader and organizer based in Central Visayas, said he got the information from an agent, who managed to penetrate the rebels.

He said the officials were marked for liquidation because of their active campaign against the insurgents.

Alcover said he was told that an NPA team had already been dispatched to carry out the plot against Task Force Davao commander Col. Eduardo del Rosario, 5th Civil Relations Group chief Lt. Col. Agape Adriacio, former Military Intelligence Group commander Lt. Col. Allen Capuyan, and former Intelligence Service Unit chief Major Jose Faustino.

Pampanga health workers to get smaller hazard pay

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—More than 800 provincial health workers in Pampanga on Monday capped their two-year campaign for their hazard pay with mixed dismay and joy, getting only less than half of the amount guaranteed by law.

Gov. Mark Lapid wound up the two-hour negotiation by assuring at least P600 monthly from July to December 2004 and P1,000 monthly in 2005.

These amounts are way below the 25 and 5 percent set under the Magna Carta of Public Health Workers (Republic Act 7305) for those with Salary Grade 19 and below and Salary Grade 20 and up, respectively. The amount is supposed to reach between P2,000 and P3,000 monthly.

Lapid said the benefit pay for this year's six-month period would be drawn from the P3-million income of the province's 10 district hospitals, where the health workers are assigned.

They comprised less than 50 percent of the capitol's 1,800 employees.

Lapid approved the provision of P1,000 in monthly hazard pay next year after the local finance committee and Board Member Lila Pineda, chair of the local health committee, agreed to put the item in the 2005 budget.

Lapid bucked the plan to source the funds for next year's hazard pay from the excess income of hospitals, saying doing this might lead to patients paying more for medical services.

Dr. Ernesto Santos, provincial health chief, also struck out the plan, calling this "anti-patient." More than 80 percent of the patients were poor and those availing of the pay wards were also members of PhilHealth, he said.

The negotiation, attended by almost 100 representatives of doctors, nurses and attendants who did not abandon their duties amid the protest, was stopped thrice.

The governor, who initially took a hard stance, citing the fiscal crisis and below average tax revenue collection, later heeded appeals to include the item in the 2005 budget.

Mayor's award

New York Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg honored some of the city's most gifted scientists with the Mayor's Awards for Excellence in Science and Technology, including the surgical team at Montefiore Medical Center who made history with the series of operations to separate the Aguirre twins. Although the fourth of these operations was completed on Aug. 4 which was after the deadline for the Mayor's Awards, Bloomberg was intent in lauding the historic accomplishment. He created a special category so the entire team of doctors and nurses at Montefiore Medical Center could be honored.

Historic 1st for New York

"In life, when something happens that is so compelling and important, you have to recognize it," Bloomberg said, referring to the historic operation which was a first for the New York hospital.

The conjoined twins were separated using a gradual surgical approach that lasted 10 months, a departure from the more common marathon operations that had separated other conjoined twins.

Reconstruction of the boys' skulls, a major project, was to be

"The eyes of the world were on the Bronx as the hospital prepared for an intricate and dangerous surgery. The final surgery took place on Aug. 5, and the rest is history. Thank goodness they continue to do well—better than anybody expected," Bloomberg said.

Staffenberg said the twins' recovery had exceeded everyone's expectations. "The time between surgeries has allowed them to make tremendous strides. The biggest improvement has been in head posture, and the way they have been taking cues from each other in physical therapy," he said.

Staffenberg added that the rebuilding of the skulls would be done in two or three stages. "The key is to get them back into physical therapy again."

Goodrich said the twins were "doing strikingly well," noting the difference in boys' personalities. "Carl, the laid-back, lazy boy has become more in-your-face, while Clarence has taken a completely different tack," he said.

"Both have remained neurologically intact throughout the procedure. Both have the legs of oxen. They're picking up on their head control. The physical therapists feel that they'll be walking by December," Goodrich said.

Plastic surgeon honored

The successful separation of the Aguirre twins has also created a worldwide awareness of the important role of plastic surgery in these complex cases.

Staffenberg was recently honored in a special "Frontiers in Plastic Surgery" panel at the annual conference of the American Society of Plastic Surgeons (ASPS), the largest plastic surgery specialty organization in the world.

He will continue the reconstructive process with smaller operations when the Aguirre twins are physically ready.

Eph 3:2-12

Lk 12:39-48

Jesus said to his disciples, "Pay attention to this: If the master of the house had known at what time the thief would come, he would not have let his house be broken into. You also must be ready, for the Son of Man will come at an hour you do not expect."

Peter said, "Lord, did you tell this parable only for us, or for everyone?" And the Lord replied, "Imagine, then, the wise and faithful steward whom the master sets over his other servants to give them food rations at the proper time. Fortunate is this servant if his master on coming home finds him doing his work. Truly, I say to you, the master will put him in charge of all his property."

"But it may be that the steward thinks: 'My Lord delays in coming,' and he begins to abuse the menservants and the servant girls, eating and drinking and getting drunk. Then the master will come on a day he does not expect him and at an hour he doesn't know. He will discharge his servant and number him among the unrelievable."

"The servant who knew his master's will, but did not prepare to do what his master wanted, will be punished with sound blows; but the one who did what deserved a punishment without knowing it shall receive fewer blows. Much will be required of the one who has been given much, and more will be asked of the one entrusted with more."

Commentary

The geometry of the heart becomes even more strange when we think of it in relation to God. St. Augustine, the great 5th century seeker after God, wrote, "God is within the inmost heart, yet the heart has wandered away from him." And referring to Christ he wrote, "For he did not delay, but ran through the world, crying out by words, deeds, death, life, descent, ascension—crying aloud to us to return to him. And he departed from our sight that we might return to our hearts and find him there." As in everything that Augustine wrote, there is an inner resonance. Some people write about God and the human spirit as if they were writing about nuts and bolts. Or if they have any sense of wonder they reserve it for the physical universe. "People go out," Augustine wrote, "and gaze in astonishment at high mountains, the huge waves of the sea, the broad reaches of rivers, the ocean that encircles the world, or the stars in their courses. But they pay no attention to themselves."

To keep gazing into one's own heart could be one of two things. It could be pure egoism, or it could be a search for God. It depends on how we approach it and do it. We in the present age find it natural to look inwards, but we are not always seeking God there. As soon as we open the door even one inch, a thousand things blow in there as well! In old-fashioned language we have to "keep vigil at the Simply put, proof of actual contribution by both parties is required, otherwise there is equal sharing. Petitioners failed to show proof of actual contribution by Pacita in the acquisition of Lot No. 152. In short, petitioners failed to prove that Pacita bought FILIPINO nurses are a "hot commodity" elsewhere.

Filipino nurses were grossly underreported because hospitals abroad, particularly those in the United States, were directly recruiting the health workers as immigrants.

NIH Executive Director Jaime Galvez-Tan said yesterday that the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA), the agency tasked with facilitating the deployment of OFWs, recorded only 84,843 nurses who left the country since 1994.

POEA data showed that 91 nurses left for the United States in 2000, 304 in 2001 and 320 in 2002. The United States is one of the top destinations of Filipino health workers.

Records from the countries of destination, however, revealed that around 50,000 nurses had left the Philippines over the past three years. A number of them were doctors who studied nursing so they could leave the country for greener pastures.

"Health workers have left the country before, but never in the history of the Philippines has this happened. You have 50,000 nurses leaving ... in three years. We need to do something now," he said.

"Do you actually believe that only a few hundreds have left in the past three years? Even our foreign counterparts know that's not true," Galvez-Tan told reporters in an interview after a lecture at the UP Manila College of Nursing.

Galvez-Tan presented the study titled "The Philippine Phenomenon of Nursing Medics: Why Doctors are Becoming Nurses" before a conference of the Education Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates in Washington D.C. last week.

He said that the Philippines, India and South Africa were invited to the conference attended mostly by recruiting countries to discuss their roles in the medical work force of the world.

The Philippines was acknowledged as the top supplier of nurses while India was the No. 1 source of doctors. South Africa also exports health workers.

Shocking health situation

"They were shocked when showed that while the Philippines was a glossy exporter of nurses and doctors, our health situation is shocking," said Galvez-Tan, who is also UP Manila's vice chancellor for research.

About 60 percent of the nurses in the United Kingdom are foreigners, majority of them Filipinos. Galvez-Tan said Filipinos were now the biggest ethno-linguistic group in England.

From 2000 to 2004, some 8,000 Filipino nurses left for the United Kingdom, according to data from the POEA, but the UK registry itself recorded 16,000 Filipino nurses who got employed in the country during the period.

Relaxed US policy on doctors

The American government has also relaxed its policy on the practice of foreign doctors in the United States, Galvez-Tan said.

Washington previously required foreign doctors studying in the United States to go back to their countries for a two-year residency, but this requirement has been discarded so the foreign specialists could serve in its poorer areas.

Galvez-Tan said the United States would need 10,000 doctors and 100,000 nurses every year for the next 20 years.

The Philippines has 418 nurses for every 100,000 people or one for every 239 people. One of the country's premier state hospitals is losing 300 to 500 of its nurses to foreign employment abroad every year, according to Galvez-Tan.

Noose tightens on Garcia trapped by questions

Police Savings and Loans Association Inc. Marcos said this was a chance for them to refute any allegations that they had enriched themselves in office.

But Diomedio Villanueva, after conferring with Benjamin Defensor and Dionisio Santiago, said they had a right against self-incrimination.

"One thing might lead to another and we might incriminate ourselves unnecessarily," Villanueva said.

Earlier, Villanueva said his remaining balance with the AFP SLAI was P200,085, while Defensor said he had less than P5 million. Santiago said he had less than P3 million.

Villanueva said it was not he who appointed Garcia to the position of comptroller but his predecessor, former AFP chief of staff and currently Interior Secretary Angelo Reyes.

"The decision was a collegial act by the board of generals which was then headed by my predecessor, General Reyes," Villanueva said.

Line of questioning

Gomez opened his line of questioning by asking Garcia about the background of his family, including his wife, Clarita Depakakibo-Garcia.

"My wife is an American citizen," Garcia admitted.

Garcia also admitted that the $100,000 in cash that his sons, Ian, Carlo and Juan Paolo, were carrying when they were stopped by US authorities in San Francisco, California, was meant for the school fees of his third son, Timothy Mark, who is studying at Parsons School in New York.

Asked if Timothy Mark was on a scholarship, Garcia said that his brother-in-law, Quilon Depakakibo, was financing his studies.

Told that his answer could be inconsistent with what he told the US Fines, Penalties and Forfeiture Office, Garcia said, "That is not the intent of the letter."

"The letter being mentioned is about additional support for my son," Garcia said.

Money was for schooling

"The support is not the total support but a contribution to the schooling," Garcia said, in effect admitting that the money seized by US customs officials belonged to his family.

Garcia also admitted that Timothy Mark was renting an apartment in New York, which was consistent with his Jan. 12, 2004 letter to US authorities.

Asked later to confirm that he had sent the letter, Garcia tried to wriggle out by saying, "Your honor, I could not testify against myself."

Gomez shot back that he had already done so.

"I thank you for confirming the existence of this letter," the Parañaque congressman said.

In his Jan. 12, 2004 letter, Garcia asked the US Fines, Penalties and Forfeiture Office for "relief from the seizure of funds." He introduced himself as an AFP officer in active service for 37 years.

"I would like to inform you, sir/madam that I have requested my sons to bring along the money in the amount of $100,000 to the US," Garcia said in the letter, a copy of which was obtained by the INQUIRER.

Garcia said the amount was to be used for the down payment for Timothy Mark's apartment, tuition and registration fees, and family expenses for the holiday season which we intend to spend in New York."

"However, I failed to advise my sons regarding the declaration of the money to US Customs," Garcia said in the letter.

Under 6 chiefs of staff

Prior to being yanked out of the comptrollership, Garcia served six AFP chiefs of staff, including present Chief of Staff Gen. Narciso Abaya.

Them were the days, old general sighs

By Carlito Pablo

THERE was a time when officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines didn't play around with military funds through "conversion," the practice of turning funds allocated for specific supplies or projects into cash.

A 78-year-old retired general recalled this period when he appeared yesterday as a resource person at the hearing of the House committees on national defense and on banks on corruption in the AFP.

in the AFP

"We did not practice conversion," said retired Brig. Gen. Guillermo Picache, who now walks with a cane.

Picache belongs to Class 1951 of the Philippine Military Academy, the first batch that graduated from the PMA after World War II.

Proudly looking on during Picache's testimony was his PMA classmate Ernesto Gidaya, also a retired general and now party-list representative of the Veterans Freedom Party.

"We belong to Class Banat (Strike)," Gidaya whispered to the INQUIRER with pride.

Picache is the founding chair and president of the Asian Institute of Strategic Studies, which is based in the University of the Philippines.

The institute, according to Picache, had published a book titled "Grappling with Graft and Corruption: The Philippine Experience."

Picache said that conversion was made possible with the collusion of suppliers and contractors. "The dealer is not stupid. He will retain a portion of the cash of 30-50 percent," he said.

Picache said that conversion often started with small funds, eventually graduating to bigger funds.

"Po-tilig lang, Pa-nanok manok. Pa-kalabaw kaibaw na," was how Picache put it.

During the hearing, Maj. Gen. Antonio Anciano, AFP deputy chief of staff for logistics, claimed that he was not aware of any conversion in the military.

"I have no knowledge," Anciano said upon grilling by lawmakers.

Separate person from institution

PROFESSOR Carolina Hernandez, presidential adviser on the recommendations of the Falciano Commission, yesterday said the investigation of military corruption showed that the AFP leadership was doing something about the problem.

"They (young officers) will be happy because the problem is being addressed. I see that there is no cover-up because there is information coming from the United States. These need to be answered and I hope the investigation (in the House) will bear fruit," Hernandez said.

She said she hoped that after the House hearings, congressmen would craft laws on "how to improve the systems inside the Armed Forces and the other parts of government so that it becomes difficult to steal."

"If the results bear fruit because there is no cover-up and the guilty parties are really punished at the end of the day, it will be a good thing," Hernandez said.

She also said that there was a need "to separate the person from the institution" in the ongoing probe of Garcia as well as any future probe into corruption in the military.

She added that to strengthen the Armed Forces as an institution, there was need to weed out corrupt officers.

Hernandez was a member of the Falciano Commission formed by President Macapagal-Arroyo to investigate the root causes of last year's Oakwood mutiny.

BURNING OF SHABU LABORATORY STOCKROOM

PDEA officer eyed in probe

By Nancy C. Carvajal

A JUNIOR police officer assigned with the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) and an unidentified male companion were the last persons to leave the suspected shabu laboratory in Parañaque City before a fire broke out last Saturday.

This was contained in the initial investigation report submitted to Senior Supt. Danilo Cabrera, director of the National Capital Region Bureau of Fire Protection.

The report, prepared by SPO1 Teodoro Gatchalian Jr., identified the PDEA officer as Chief Insp. Roselier Fabian, who turned out to be the commanding officer of Eniklon Amihan, the PDEA agent who witnessed the fire.

Amihan, a member of the Aviation Security Group detailed with PDEA, told investigators that Fabian, together with an unidentified male companion, left the place between 4 and 4:30 a.m. on board a silver Starex van.

Police investigators said Fabian should be made to explain his presence in the area before the fire erupted.

PDEA agents earlier raided the three-story house on Nazareth Street, Multinational Village, Parañaque, after receiving reports that it was being used as a shabu laboratory.

Amihan said he was on the second floor with a PDEA informant known as Tambi when he smelled something burning at about 5 a.m.

When Amihan went down to investigate, he saw smoke billowing from the stockroom at the right side of the compound, where pieces of evidence in the raid were supposedly stored.

Amihan said he heard a mild explosion when the fire was already evident.

Investigators placed the damages of the incident at P100,000.

Fire investigators revealed that the chemicals inside the stockroom included thionyl chloride and ethyl alcohol. Thionyl chloride is an essential chemical in converting ephedrine to shabu.

The Oct. 12 PDEA raid in Multinational Village has been hounded by controversies.

Until now, PDEA has not released the value of the discovered chemicals and materials used to manufacture shabu.

Meanwhile, a source from PDEA revealed that the shabu facility has been under surveillance since Oct. 7.

LTFRB opens more calibration centers

By Clarissa S. Batino

AGITATED taxi drivers and operators could take some comfort in the plan of the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board to open more meter calibration centers this weekend.

LTFRB Chair Maria Elena Bautista said that of the 42,000 registered taxis, only another 1,500 taxi operators paid their fees and applied for calibration as of Monday top of the 4,300 last week.

Even so, Bautista said the LTFRB would likely open calibration centers in Fort Bonifacio, at the OCP complex and at the Philippine Estates Authority.

The agency would continue to hold taxi meter-calibration with in the SSS compound in Quezon City and in the Francisco Motors compound in Las Piñas City.

Bautista said of the 4,300 that paid last week, only about 100 units had not been calibrated.

Taxi drivers and operators said that the LTFRB was ill-equipped in handling the calibration as the agency opened only two centers.

"We had difficulty in handling the calibration because all taxis went to the SSS when there was another center at Francisco Motors," said Bautista.

Crusading princess seeks no red carpet

By Tessa V. Quismundo

NO RED carpets will be rolled out when royalty graces Manila next week.

Princess Caroline of Hanover will be stopping by at two city-run social welfare facilities in the capital when she comes to visit the country this month. The daughter of late Princess Grace of Monaco will be making rounds in charitable institutions aided by Amade Mondiale of Monaco, an institution founded by her mother.

But the coming of European royal blood would be modest, as the Princess would like to keep her arrival low-profile, said a city official.

Simple, no fanfare

"We were told that she wants to keep it simple, and she doesn't want so much fanfare," Manila Department of Social Welfare (MDSW) Jose Baranda told the Inquirer.

On Oct. 27, the Princess would be visiting MDSW's Reception and Action Center (RAC), a shelter for homeless children from newborns to 17-year-olds, and the Manila Youth Rehabilitation Center (MYRC), a facility for minors who Baranda called "children in conflict with the law."

"It's not a state visit, not even an official visit. It's a personal visit that aims to raise funds for the institutions, and for her to see the children," said Baranda.

Both RAC and MYRC, operated and maintained by the city government, are beneficiaries of Virlanie Foundation Inc., a non-government organization that provides a home for street children, minors tagged in crime or victims of abuse, and single mothers.

Other facilities

The Princess is expected to visit other facilities supported by this foundation in other cities in Metro Manila.

Virlanie Foundation Inc. is aided by Amade Philippines, affiliated with Amade Mondiale of Monaco, an NGO that helps the underprivileged around the world. Princess Caroline is now president of the Monte Carlo-based institution.

Baranda said that the Princess' advance party would visit the two Manila institutions tomorrow to brief local officials on the protocol for receiving Her Royal Highness.

Smokey residents hail transfer

RESIDENTS of the former Smokey Mountain of Tondo hailed as a "victory of the people" the transfer of more than 900 families from their temporary homes to permanent condo-type housing units.

The National Housing Authority recently announced the transfer of 960 families from the temporary housing facility in Barangay Aroma, Tondo, to the Vites permanent facility, where new condominium-type units await them on Nov. 3 to 12, 2004.

"For the record, we owe this long overdue transfer of the remaining Smokey settlers, to the patience and vigilance of the people themselves," said Fr. Ben Beltran, parish priest of the Parish of the Risen Christ, to which the former dump community belongs.

Beltran cited the recent Senate upheaval, led by Sen. Miriam Defensor Santiago, as "another attempt to undermine the efforts of the people of the community" to chart their own course and lead decent lives.

3 students die after allegedly drunken jeep driver hits them

By Luigi A. del Puerto

HOME is a place these students would now never come to.

A passenger jeep lost control and came crashing into seven schoolchildren at noon yesterday in Jala-Jala, Rizal, killing three of the pupils and seriously injuring four others, police said.

The schoolchildren had just emerged from the gate of the Jala-Jala Elementary School and were on their way home, according to Insp. Rhonnie Arreola, chief of the Jala-Jala Police.

The jeepney's driver, 23-year-old Alvin San Jose, was drunk, Arreola said.

"He was very drunk. He lost consciousness as he was traveling to the town proper," Arreola said over the phone.

"The jeepney swerved to the left, and went straight into the school gate," Arreola said.

The police said they were also students of the school but their ages had not been determined as of press time.

"This is a very sad incident," Arreola said. "We are all affected in town."

17th ANNUAL SECURITY EXHIBITION INVITATION

Guard All is celebrating its 18th year in business providing the Philippines with electronic security services. Our business has evolved from providing simple alarm and camera systems to designing integrated solutions to protect and enhance business profitability from internal and external threats. Today we design systems to make sure potential losses from fire, theft, shrinkage, lost labor, illegal gratuities and more are discovered and dealt with. Work place practices change dramatically when everyone knows the likelihood of being caught.

Good security and surveillance means better productivity and profit. Join us at the exhibition and let us show you how modern electronic systems can improve your business, help manage employees better and secure your investment. Reduction of theft, improved productivity, rationalizing security manpower are just some of the benefits. Who Should Attend: Business Operators, Security Professionals, Managers, Architects, Doctors, Home Owners, Developers, Industrialists, Retailers, Manufacturers, Banks, Pawn Shops, Money Changers, Condo Dwellers, Restaurants, Call Centers. Just one hour with us may just change the way you operate.

PLANNING FOR NATIONWIDE STRIKE

Transport groups ready new P1.50 hike

By Clarissa S. Batino

ANY DAY now, transport groups said they would hold a strike to paralyze public transport nationwide in protest of what they see as faulty government policies, especially of the Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA).

At the same time, jeepney operators and drivers said they would seek a new P1.50 increase in the minimum fare once the price of diesel hits between P23 and P23.50 to a liter.

When the P1.50 fare hike took effect in mid-June, diesel was at P18 per liter. Diesel now costs between P21.75 and P22.95 a liter.

"We were supposed to file a fare hike petition when diesel went up to P21. But we deferred it after consulting with the government," said Zenaida Maranan, president of the Federation of Drivers and Jeepney Operators of the Philippines.

New petition for submission

"Now, we plan to submit our petition to the LTFRB as soon as we resolve some of our issues with the MMDA," she added.

Maranan said the jeeps, buses, taxis, shuttles, FXs and tricycles were just waiting for the final word on the schedule of the strike.

She said the public would be informed of the strike a day before.

"We would be coming out with leaflets to also explain why we are holding a transport holiday the day before," said the president of the biggest transport group in the country. The Fejodap has more than 250,000 members nationwide. More than 50,000 of these are in Metro Manila.

Among the concerns, Maranan said the biggest would be the new ticketing policies of the MMDA.

She said drivers and operators are being burdened with huge interests on the fine. The MMDA slaps a 50 percent surcharge on drivers or operators who fail to pay a fine after three weeks.

Stiff penalty

Maranan added that the MMDA impounds vehicles whose drivers have not complied with the summons in relation to a violation. She said the MMDA also charges a stiff penalty of P6,000 on out-of-line violators.

"Maramang kapalapan ang MMDA. Patayin nila ang hanay ng public transport," according to Maranan.

Apart from Fejodap, major jeepney groups like the Pinagkaisang Samahan ng Tsuper at Operatoryor Nationwide, the Philippine Confederation of Drivers Organization-Alliance of Concerned Transportation Operators (PCDO-Acto), the Makati Jeepney Operators and Drivers Association, and the Alliance of Transport Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines are ready to go strike.

Members of the participating jeepney groups total more than 700,000 nationwide.

Maranan said most bus groups were also girding for the transport holiday.

Efren de Luna, president of PCDO-Acto, said the fare hike was insufficient in addressing the concerns of drivers and operators.

"We will definitely hold a nationwide transport strike within the month," said De Luna.

RP chessers toil to beat Ireland

The leaders after four rounds:

MEN: 14.5 pts.—Ukraine; 14.0—Israel; 12.0—Russia; Slovakia; Azerbaijan; 11.5—Bosnia Herzegovina, Spain A, Armenia, India, France, Cuba; 11.0—Georgia, Bulgaria, Scotland, Poland, England; 10.5—Philippines, Uzbekistan, United States, Netherlands, Croatia, Vietnam, Argentina, Denmark; 10.0—Kazakhstan, Serbia Montenegro, Czech Republic, Greece, Croatia, Germany, Chile, Latvia, Switzerland, China, Slovenia.

WOMEN: 11.0—China; 9.5—England, Ukraine, Russia; 9.0—Germany, France, India; 8.5—Poland, Sweden, United States, Vietnam; 8.0—Hungary, Argentina, Netherlands, Latvia, Georgia; 7.5—Uzbekistan, Slovakia, Cuba, Slovenia, Serbia Montenegro, Belarus, Romania, Israel, Greece, Armenia; 8.0—Philippines

MALLORCA, Spain—It's not going to be easy.

This the Philippines found out after pounding Ireland, 3-1, Monday to surge into a tie for 16th place in the World Chess Olympiad.

Grandmaster Eugene Torre and International Master Jayson Gonzales secured victories with the white pieces while IM Mark Paragua and national champion Darwin Layo salvaged draws from losing positions.

After four rounds, the Filipinos have so far collected 10.5 points in the company of Vietnam, United States, the Netherlands, Canada, Argentina and Denmark.

Ukraine dealt defending champion Russia a rare 2.5-1.5 loss with GM Vassily Ivanchuk (2705) pulling off a breathtaking victory over GM Alexander Morozevich (2758) with black at Board 1.

Ukraine shows way

As a result, Ukraine kept the sole lead with 14.5 points, half-a-point ahead of third-ranked Israel.

Israel crushed Bulgaria, 3.5-0.5, to open a two-point cushion over Russia, Slovakia and Azerbaijan.

India, which routed the Philippines, 3-1, in the third round, won its fourth straight match at the expense of the United States, 2.5-1.5, to be in sixth place with 11.5 points.

China stayed half a point behind the Philippines after holding off Australia, 2.5-1.5.

The final score hardly reflected the pitched battles that marked the RP-Ireland match.

Torre and Gonzales, who share the same room, provided the much-needed points after turning down draw overtures midway through their matches.

The 52-year-old Torre used a rare line in EUGENE Torre declines draw offer to win.

"Lamang ako ng pawn pero hindi sapat para matulad. Nagdala ako ng taunting para magkamali siya. Nagkamali nga (I was a pawn up, but that wasn't enough to pull off a win. I prayed hard that he'd make a mistake. He did)," said Gonzales, who had to go through rigorous eliminations back home to make it here.

Gonzales opts to play on

Quinn made a peace overture on the 17th, but Gonzales, aware of the team's difficulties at Board 2 and 3, decided to take his chances.

For a while, the Filipinos appeared headed for a shock defeat after Paragua and Layo, both playing black, stumbled early on against determined opponents.

Playing black for the third straight day, Paragua lost a pawn against Brian Kelly, but resorted to tactics to win the exchange. Despite two connected center pawns, Kelly was unable to press home the win and agreed to a draw in 57 moves.

Layo, a former Asian Juniors runner-up, halved the point with Joseph Ryan in 41 moves despite double quality down. He used his powerful bishop and an active knight to neutralize Ryan's pair of rooks.

The hard-earned win was half-expected.

Team captain Sammy Estimo had warned his players not to take Ireland lightly.

"You can never be sure here. One player from Botswana beat a Vietnamese. So I told the boys to be very careful," said Estimo.

Next on the Filipinos' itinerary is Canada which dropped a close 2.5-1.5 decision to powerhouse England Sunday.

GM Joey Antonio swings back into action after a rest day to relieve Paragua at Board 2. Emmanuel Senador also returns to action at Board 4 in lieu of Layo.

Torre and Gonzales play the first and third boards, respectively.

Filipinas draw Danes

In women's play the Philippines drew all boards with Denmark to improve to 6 points, good for a share of 43rd place.

Women Fide Master Sheerie Joy Lomibao, still undefeated after four matches, picked up her third draw, this time with WIM Evgenia Hansen.

WIM Beverly Mendoza split the point with Oksana Vovk while rookie Loreshy Quizon agreed to a draw with Miriam Olsen.

China led the field with 11 points following its 2.5-0.5 win over Germany.

Ortiz fires up Red Sox hopes

BOSTON—David Ortiz drove in three runs, including the game winner in the bottom of the 14th inning, to lead Boston to a rallying 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees which kept the Red Sox's postseason hopes alive Monday.

Ortiz's shot to center field off Esteban Loaiza in the 14th scored Johnny Damon and sent the best-of-seven American League Championship Series back to New York for Game Six Tuesday with the Yankees up, 3-2.

At nearly six hours, Game Five was the longest encounter in postseason history.

The Red Sox have now seized two straight come-from-behind victories in extra innings after dropping the first three games of the series.

It was the second night in a row that Ortiz delivered the game-winning hit, following his 12th-inning homer in Game Four which helped the Red Sox avert a Yankees sweep.

"All I do is hit ... so when I get the chance, I have to get it done," Ortiz told reporters.

Boston, however, faces a tough task to advance to the World Series as no team has ever rallied from a 3-0 deficit to win a championship series.

Both teams were forced to go deep into their bullpens after Boston bashed in two runs to tie the game 4-4 in the eighth.

Neither the Yankees nor the Red Sox could produce in the ninth, sending the contest into extra innings.

Yankees manager Joe Torre said Boston had gained the momentum in the series after the two dramatic finishes at Fenway Park but suggested New York would bounce back.

"I'm not sure how these two games, apart from being frustrating as hell, change our opinions of ourselves," Torre said. "Sure, the momentum is on their side but I'm not sure it affects us."

New York's Mike Mussina got off to a shaky start, throwing 34 pitches in the first inning as Boston took an early 2-0 lead on an Ortiz RBI and a bases-loaded walk.

Kent super for Astros

HOUSTON, Texas—Jeff Kent smacked a game-winning three-run home run off closer Jason Isringhausen Monday to lift Houston to a 3-0 victory over St. Louis and a 3-2 lead in baseball's National League Championship Series.

With the best-of-seven series knotted at two games apiece and neither team able to generate any offense in a superbly pitched game, Carlos Beltran opened the ninth against Isringhausen with a base hit.

One out later he stole second, and St. Louis manager Tony La Russa opted to walk Lance Berkman on a 2-2 count.

But Kent crushed Isringhausen's next pitch to give Houston their third win in a row.

"About 95 percent of my at-bats I go up there with a first-pitch attitude—I'm swinging," Kent said.

"It's a little shock," said Cardinals manager Tony La Russa, whose team had seemed in control of the series after winning the first two games at home.

Houston's Brandon Backe, who had only nine career starts before this post-season, held the Cardinals' formidable offense hitless for five and two-thirds innings, while St. Louis starter Woody Williams allowed Houston just one first-inning single in seven strong innings.

Tony Womack singled in the sixth to break up Backe's no-hitter. But after Larry Walker walked, Backe retired Albert Pujols on a pop-up to second to end the threat.

Paeng, Jojo lead World Cup qualifier

FOUR-TIME World Cup champion Paeng Nepomuceno and reigning ladies' titlist Jojo Canare showed the way into the quarterfinals of the World Cup national finals Monday at the SM Megamall Center. The 47-year-old Nepomuceno, seeing action for the first time in two years due to a left wrist injury, carded 5159 pins in 24 game to finish ahead of Benny Dyotic (5117), reigning World Cup kingpin CJ Suarez (5059) and five others in the men's division. Canare, bronze medalist in last year's international finals in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, tallied 3992 in 20 games to pace Ellen Ramos (3982), Asia's top female pinoceptor Liza del Rosario (3950) and five others in the ladies' group.

Bibat joins RP team to World Amateurs

MICHAEL Bibat got to board a plane to Los Angeles together with the rest of the Philippine golf team last night after his application for an American visa was re-evaluated and reconsidered by the United States Embassy. The original team picked by the NGAP for the World Amateurs in Puerto Rico would have gone as scheduled, but Artemio Murakami, the erstwhile first alternate, kept his regular spot when Jun Bernas declined. Bibat got a call last Friday and was given a visa Monday afternoon, while Bernas got a call from the Embassy yesterday, moments after he had teed off in the Samsung Amateurs in Baguio. Even Roger Returera's case was given a second chance, but booking difficulties prompted Frankie Milloza's personal swing coach not to go through the process again. Gene Bondoc also flew out with the team as first alternate.

Taguig cagers barge into NBC nat'l finals

FORWARD Taguig overpowered Laguna Spring, 80-66, Monday night before a packed crowd at the G.P. Tinga Memorial Hall to bag the NBC (National Basketball Conference) North division title and book the first slot in the national finals.

With the Laguna squad only a point away at 64-65 in the last 4:10, Jimboy Robilots, Ogie Gumataot and Elbert Alberto bashed in 15 points to complete a two-game sweep for Mayor Freddie Tinga's Taguig cagers.

Taguig also came from behind to nose out the top-rated Laguna squad of NBC president Nathaniel "Tac" Padilla and Gov. Teresina "Ningning" Lazzaro in Game 1 played at the RECS Complex in Sta. Cruz, Laguna.

"We didn't want the series to extend to Game 3," said Taguig coach Danny Gavieres. "Whoever wins in the South, we'll be ready for them."

Tribu Sugbu and Ozamiz are locked in a 1-1 tie in the South division finals.

Torrecampo, Bayron set early pace at John Hay

BAGUO—Ronnie Torrecampo and Rufino Bayron carded contrasting two-over 71s yesterday to share a one-stroke lead at the start of the Samsung Amateur Tour at the John Hay GOLF Club course here.

Torrecampo recovered from a sluggish start with a 34 spiled by an eagle on the 12th coming home while Bayron, seeking to join elder brother Jay in the finals, turned in steady nines of 35-36 to set the pace in this tourney serving as the sixth leg of a nationwide eliminations.

Dave Hernandez, finding stiff competition in Torrecampo and national player Jun Bernas, was just a stroke behind after a 73.

Bernas, whose failure to secure a US visa prevented him from joining the Puerto Rico-bound World Amateurs team, found himself vying for another title. He buried the first two holes but could only score a 73.

Local ber Chester Calpotura was another stroke back at 74.

tion of two native fruits."

One amateur basketball official who went to the place in Negros Occidental where this cager had supposedly vowed to render community service to repay residents "for their silence," swore having smelled something very fishy.

Yes, it's far from over and the clamor is for a more thorough probe.

Somebody suggested zeroing in on another player who moved into the PBA straight from the defunct MBB where his citizenship had been the subject of suspicion.

There could indeed be more Fil-Shams around than those found by Justice department investigators, who were fortunately roused by a new Senate committee headed by Lito Lapid.

Anyway, what should be of greater interest is the promised investigation of people—agents, scouts, even team owners, managers, government functionaries, etc.—who could be behind the fiascos.

Was the PBA, pure and simple, a victim? Or are there people within the pro league involved in fooling the fans and the national government?

For the record, Bureau of Immigration Commissioner Al Fernandez said his office has been instituting proceedings in preparation for the deportation of these players.

Remember how the BI was criticized for not lifting a finger after the Senate committee headed by Robert Barbers had established the culpability of the so-called Fil-Shams?

Fernandez had explained that the procedure called for a final decision from the DOJ before he could act.

Now that the DOJ has made a ruling, Fernandez cannot be expected to blink.

"If they would like to appeal, they could have a last recourse by going to the President," Fernandez was quoted as saying.

But wasn't President Gloria Arroyo, an avid sports fan, also a victim of these citizenship cheats?

DAYRIT: We can win.

Dayrit predicts SEAG victory for RP

By Marc Anthony Reyes

THE PHILIPPINES will win the overall championship in the 2005 Southeast Asian Games, Philippine Olympic Committee president Celso Dayrit has predicted.

Dayrit yesterday presented a strategy based on a study to maximize the country's chances in the biennial meet.

The study details how the country stands to gain at least 42 gold medals, with top contenders Vietnam and Thailand losing 75 and 11 golds, respectively.

"It is very possible we can win the overall title," said Dayrit during an audio-visual presentation of the study.

POC chair Robert Aventajado accused Dayrit on Monday of being "too magnanimous" during the SEAG Federation meeting for allowing the number of events to rise and for depriving "a chance of a chance to win as many gold medals as possible."

The study, however, shows that based on the 388 events from 41 sports disciplines in the 2005 program, the Philippines can realistically win 88 gold medals, with Thailand, Vietnam and Indonesia garnering 85, 83 and 48 golds, respectively.

Dayrit attributed this to the exclusion of events in the 2003 Vietnam Games which the hosts dominated like fin swimming and hand ball, as well as in shooting, billiards and canoe/kayak.

But with the inclusion of some events in the 2005 agenda—including arms, billiards, bowling and women's boxing—the country can rake in 42 gold medals. In the same token, Vietnam and Thailand stand to gain only six and two golds, respectively.

MIKKO Briones turned in the fastest time to keep the crown in the Experienced category of the second Castrol Autocross Invitational at the SM City North Edsa Open Parking Lot D recently.

Briones raced trouble-free to share honors with Peewee Menchola, Ulysses Manungding and Miguel Briones who topped the Pro, Novice and Newbie classes, respectively.

Briones clocked 58 minutes and 13.10 seconds to beat Philay Tray Molina (1:04:19.2) and RP Manut (1:04:28.30) in the race sponsored by Castrol Phils., SM City North Edsa, SM Supermalls, The French Baker, A-toy Body Kits, Air Philippines, PLDT myDSL, Auto Extreme, Top 40 Shirts, Ford Quezon Avenue, Wheelers Club International, Crack Pie Solution, Net 25, Concept One, Xenon Bulbs, H & R, Big Shot Billiards, Aqua Cool, Dipic, Triplex, Flower Power, Good Team Printing Inc., Max Meyer Paints, CI Magazine, Tech & Tuner Magazine, GTS Car Care Center and KIX.

The event drew teams representing Big Chill, Explorer, Meycauayan Auto Club, Cabanatuan Auto Club, STS Cavite and MR Autolandia.

The other winners were Manungding in Novice Modified A and B, Jhac de Leon in the women's race, Dodie Villanueva in the Ford Sacre Bleu Club, Emerson Ocampo in the Experienced FWD Modified and Miguel Alberto in the Open Unlimited.

Noted Formula 3 driver Mark Goddard, Paul Salapantan of Castrol Phils. and organizer Willie Dandan of Team Nitro Motorsports awarded the unique limited-edition-only trophies to the podium winners.

The top placers also received premium Castrol oil products, gift certificates and items from sponsors.

Intoxicated drinks, under suspicious, reckless impudence and other boob-tube boobooos

HOST: From your extensive experience as a singer, can you tell us if good singing talent is inborn, or learned?

Guest: Well, as what I think, mahirap talaga kung hindi ka inborn maging singer. (Ah, so...)

VIEWFINDER

Nestor U. Torte

Host: We have a complaint against a restaurant, coming from a barangay captain. We have the complainant with us, so let's ask him Sir, what is your complaint against the restaurant in question?

Guest: Because it's selling intoxicated drinks. (Hic! said the beer bottle, grinning sappily.)

Host: When you lost your TV show, were you sad?

Guest: Yes, I admit, sad—but not so sad in the sense of the word.

(Now, that's really sad!)

Host: What do you like to do most of all?

Guest: Scuba-diving!

Host: What's the special appeal of scuba-diving to you?

Guest: Oh, because underwater, it's so peace!

(So peace—with the fish? You wish!)

Host: If there is a terrorist attack reported in your building, what would you do?

Guest: First, we have to isolate. Nobody can come in or out, until after investigation.

Host: Nobody can leave?

Guest: No, all are under suspicious. (Ah, under suspicious!)

Quizmaster: Before it was torn down, what did the Berlin wall separate?

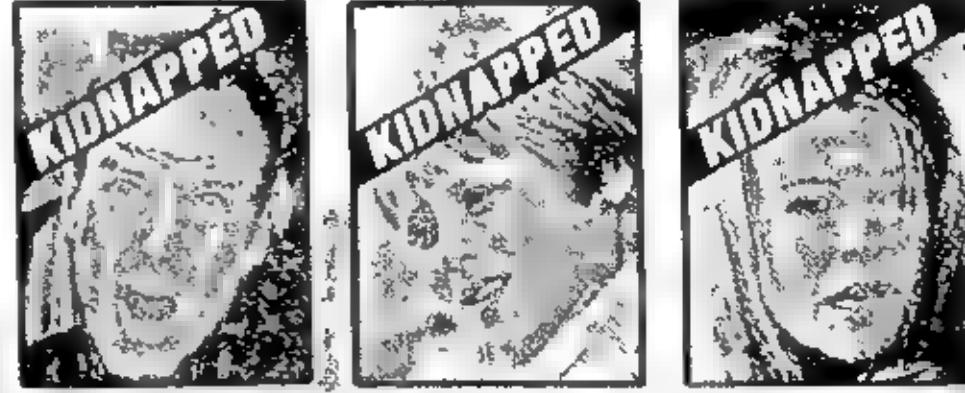

Contestant 1: England and Russia!

Malacañang accepts resignation of MTRCB Chair Laguardia

By Juliet Javellana and Marinel R. Cruz

PRESIDENT Macapagal-Arroyo has accepted the resignation of Movie and Television Review and Classification Board chair Ma Consolata R. Laguardia, Malacañang said yesterday.

A Malacañang statement said Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita, in a letter yesterday, formally informed Laguardia about the President's acceptance of her resignation.

But Laguardia herself said she has neither received any word from Malacañang nor talked with Secretary Ermita about the resignation letter she filed last September.

"But I will wait for it," Laguardia said yesterday, referring to the Malacañang statement. "And as a good soldier, I will follow my leader. It's really up to the President."

Malacañang said the President has yet to announce a replacement for Laguardia.

The Malacañang statement said the term of Laguardia and the 30 board members of the MTRCB expired last Sept. 30.

Under Presidential Decree No. 1986 creating the MTRCB, the board's chair, vice chair, executive director and 30 board members have a one-year term subject to reappointment by the President.

Malacañang earlier denied that "Superstar" Nora Aunor, a supporter of Ms. Arroyo, would be the next MTRCB chair.

Laguardia said she learned of the Malacañang announcement only from an employee of MTRCB who saw a flash report about it on TV.

"I didn't see that report," Laguardia told INQUIRER Entertainment on the phone.

"There are people who want the chairman out," said one

MTRCB insider who, however, refused to elaborate.

Last July, MTRCB

board member Ms. gr. Nico Bautista had called for Laguardia's immediate replacement for alleged "graft and corruption, immorality and misuse of funds."

In a one-page letter to Ms. Arroyo, Monsignor Bautista accused Laguardia of "lack of direction and unimaginative leadership."

Bautista and an-

ber, Benjamin Ber-

Laguardia of illegal

CELLULAR *

"SPEED" with a heart

If you love the character that Keanu Reeves portrayed in Speed, you will love Chris Evans in CELLULAR. The film is a fastpaced edge-of-your-seat thrill ride from begining to end.

Film critic Roger Ebert described Cellular as "SPEED with a heart."

What if you received a call on your cell phone from a complete stranger, with the frantic voice on the other end begging you to help save her life? Would you hang up immediately because it is none of your business? Would you risk your own life to help other people?

A random wrong number on his cell phone sends a young man into a high-stakes race against time to save a woman's life

Jessica Martin, a teacher and mother is kidnapped from her home by assailants and taken to a secret location. Fearful for her life and completely in the dark as to her abductors' motives, Jessica manages to patch together a shattered telephone and secretly place a call to an unknown number in a last-ditch attempt to save herself. Ryan, the carefree young man who answers the panicked call, suddenly finds himself Jessica's last hope.

With no knowledge of Jessica other than her hushed, fearful voice on the other end of the tenuous cell phone connection, Ryan is quickly thrown into a world of conspiracy, deception and murder in a frantic search to find and save her. The lives of Jessica and her family are in his hands, but what is waiting for him on the other side of the line and what will it cost him to find out?

Chris Evans who plays Ryan in Cellular is the hottest young star in Hollywood today. His next role will be in FANTASTIC FOUR, the big-budgeted $150m megamovie next year. He will play Johnny Storm.

CELLULAR also stars Academy Awards winner Kim Basinger and Jason Statham (The Transporter). •

Bourse reviews deals involving MPC shares

By Elizabeth L. Sanchez

THE PHILIPPINE Stock Exchange (PSE) is looking into the trades of Metro Pacific Corp. (MPC), the local holding firm of Hong Kong conglomerate First Pacific Co., over disclosure concerns of stockbrokers.

Some local brokers have spoken to PSE president Francis Lim over heavy selling of MPC shares before First Pacific disclosed its plan to sell 5 percent of its stake in MPC. The move was aimed at raising funds for MPC's troubled inter-island shipping unit Negros Navigation Co. (Nenaco).

"The PSE is conducting a formal review of transactions relating to the MPC shares and the appropriate departments will render their reports at the earliest possible time," PSE president Francis Lim said.

David Nugent, MPC vice president, said the sales were fully disclosed as required by the stock exchange. "Everything was done above board and to the highest disclosure standards," Nugent said.

Market sources told the Inquirer that there was "massive selling" of MPC shares between August and October with a foreign broker spearheading the deals.

Sources said that last September, MPC disclosed new strate-

Lambo on the lam

FORMER AIM president Felipe Alfonso has not been the lone victim within Metrobank of the checks scam involving former students of his at the Asian Institute of Management.

Metrobank has just dismissed a female branch manager, after the bank discovered that it lost P2.1 million in a checks encashment scam in their Pioneer Kapitolyo branch that had also involved the father and son Bitangas of Corinthian Gardens.

The Bitangas are said to be students who have earned the confidence of Alfonso that the latter even entrusted four pre-signed blank checks to Anthony Bitanga, a young car accessories shop owner in The Fort.

Instead of being used in a purported Bitangas mission as had been directed by Alfonso, the young Bitanga palmed off the Alfonso checks, with a combined face value of P32.5 million, to acquire a Lamborghini Murcielago, a BMW 645 Ci and a BMW X3.

What is strange is that when Alfonso, who was a director and chair of the bank's risk management committee, entrusted his personal checks to Bitanga sometime in August, the Metrobank board had just concluded months of investigation and has approved the filing of estafa and falsification cases against the branch manager and Mateo Bitanga, the father of Anthony, who is himself facing a string of estafa cases in various Metro Manila courts.

Stranger still, Alfonso has desisted from filing any criminal or civil case against the young Bitanga for having fraudulently used his checks, despite the educator himself now being sued for estafa after three of his checks that Bitanga used bounced.

According to the grapevine, Alfonso last week even agreed to raise P3 million just so the missing Lamborghini, valued at P20 million, may finally be released by a car dealer-money lender to the original owner, who, in turn, would drop the estafa complaint against Alfonso.

As it turned out, the missing Italian muscle car had been in the custody of Quezon City car dealer Rolando Esguerra, along with the BMW 645 Ci. Esguerra's alibi, according to the grapevine, is that Bitanga pawned the two luxury cars to him, allegedly for P7 million.

With the exotic cars still unreturned to the registered owner, Camp Crame has issued a "hot car" alarm against the missing Lamborghini and Bimmer.

The other BMW, the X3, is apparently safe in the meantime, having been duly paid for, after the first of the four Alfonso checks, for P4 million, cleared. The German SUV was last seen being driven around by the young Bitanga, followed by a carload of bodyguards.

According to the grapevine, Alfonso called up the Metrobank Corinthian Plaza branch to hold off the encashment of the first check while he was scrambling to put funds into his account, which he managed to do after two days.

If this version is correct, then Alfonso knew all along as to how much and to what purpose his first check went.

Pacific opportunities

TWO more units at Pacific Plaza, the queen of the Ayala Ridge condos, are being unloaded through a sheriff sale at the Makati City Hall next week.

Both 285-sq.m., three-bedroom affairs, the condo units used to be owned by couple Alex and Nancy Go of Landlex Industries and by Mary Ann Crane.

Heard through the grapevine

TAIPAN Henry Sy Sr. is short of less than half a percentage point from becoming the undisputed majority owner of China Banking Corp.

The SM mall magnate is still pursuing his bit-by-bit buying strategy of Chinabank shares from the market.

Managing Family Corporations

Nov 22 - 26, 2004

- Defining the Role of the Family in the Business
- Identifying Key Issues & Challenges of Family Businesses
- Identifying Significant Areas for Improvement
- Management of Family Corporations

Program Overview

In this course, you will study together the powerful tools of effective families and businesses.

AIM believes in the strength of shared visions and strategic partnerships. Your partnership with AIM during the FAMCOR experience will enhance the partnerships within your own organization-partnerships born out of the need to balance the interests of the family, professional employees, and the whole organization. To help you achieve this critical balance, the FAMCOR course takes you through these important steps: (1) An understanding of the family corporation as it currently exists, (2) Strategic planning to identify a vision for the future and (3) A plan to achieve the vision. The FAMCOR course will help you understand the management of family corporations from the following viewpoints: (1) Family dynamics, (2) Family business systems and (3) Research.

Recommended for Family members and professional managers of family-owned businesses. Participants should be at least 21 years old or college graduates.

Program Benefit

This family business management course will help you to identify and analyze the key issues and challenges of family corporations. You will understand the distinctive qualities and interrelationships of family corporations as well as recognize potential areas for improvement within the family business. Through the viewpoints of family dynamics and family business systems, you will be able to develop and implement improvements to ensure growth. For maximum benefit and impact, family corporations should be represented by at least two family members (from different generations) and at least one professional manager. However, individual enrollment is also acceptable.

Texas Instruments expects 10% sales growth

By Ronald W. Domingo

TEXAS Instruments Philippines expects its sales revenues to go up by at least 10 percent to $3 billion this year, according to company president Norberto Viera.

Viera said this was a "normal" growth figure considering the same trend in the digital cellular communications industry.

He said that for next year, TIP was expecting sales to grow by 5 percent to 6 percent in line with the projected 10 percent to 11 percent growth in the electronics sector.

The company, whose parent unit is based in Dallas, is engaged in the production of digital signal processor and analog technologies used in cellular phones, the Internet, cameras and audio electronics.

TIP's DSPs represent all of such processors used in Nokia mobile phones and 80 percent of all the processors used in Siemens units.

Viera further said that in preparation for growth, TIP had earmarked some $300 million in additional investment over the next two or three years.

He said the amount would fund the development of a facility that would add 50 percent in the company's production capacity.

TIP is also scheduled to introduce next year new products such as the stack die used in third-generation mobile phones. Texas Instruments is already producing this product in Japan and Korea and will expand production here.

In a related matter, the Semiconductor and Electronics Industries of the Philippines said investments in the sector that were registered with the Board of Investments and the Philippine Economic Zone Authority reached P19.5 billion.

The amount represents 67 businesses that generated a total of some 23,000 jobs.

According to Seipi, which held its annual CEO Forum yesterday, the country now represented 10 percent of the world supply of semiconductor manufacturing services, 50 percent of the world's production of 2.5-inch hard disk drives, and 10 percent of the world's production of 3.5-inch HDDs.

Other big names in the industry that have investments in the country are Intel with its largest microprocessor and flash test factory, Toshiba which has located one of three plants that are the world's only manufacturers of laptops.

The three largest HDD producers in the Philippines are Hitachi Ltd. with 500,000 units a year; Fujitsu Computer Product Corp. and Toshiba.

BSP tightens screening of bank auditors

By Doris C. Dumao

THE BANGKO Sentral ng Pilipinas has further tightened the screening of external auditors that would check the books of banks and other financial institutions.

The BSP said in a recent circular that it would set performance standards for external auditors, who must also go through a stringent pre-qualification and accreditation process.

Based on the new rules, the selection of external auditors would be valid for three years, after which the auditors must renew their mandate.

"The (BSP's) Supervision and Examination Sector shall make an annual assessment of the performance of external auditors and will recommend deletion from the list even prior to the three-year renewal period, if based on assessment, the external auditors' report did not comply with BSP requirements," the BSP said.

External auditors that will meet the requirements provided in the circular shall be included in the list of accredited external auditors.

In case of a partnership, inclusion in the list of selected external auditors shall apply to the audit firm only, not to the individual signing partners or auditors under its employment, the circular said.

Only external auditors accredited by the BSP are allowed to conduct regular audits on banks, subject to the following conditions:

- No external auditor may be engaged by a bank if he had or was committed to acquire any direct or material indirect financial interest in the bank, or if his independence is considered impaired under the circumstances specified in the Code of Professional Ethics for Certified Public Accountants.

In the case of a partnership, this limitation shall apply to the partners, associates and the auditor-in-charge of the engagement;

- The external auditor and the members of the audit team do not have/should not have outstanding loans or any credit accommodations (except credit card obligations) with any bank to be audited/being audited at the time of signing the engagement and during the engagement;

- The external auditor and members of the audit team adhere to the highest standards of professional conduct, including integrity and objectivity; and

- The external auditor should have at least five years of track record in conducting external audit.

The BSP said it would give out the list of selected external auditors to all banks, quasi-banks, trust entities and non-stock savings/loan associations every year.

Gov't under fire for absorbing P200-B Napocor debt

By Abigail L. Ho

SOLONS from both houses of Congress lashed out at the national government for going ahead with the absorption of P200 billion of the National Power Corp.'s debts even though it had virtually no way of repaying these.

Militant lawmaker Crispin Beltran of the Anakpawis party-list group accused the government of being an inconsistent hypocrite, moving ahead with the Napocor debt absorption even after declaring a fiscal crisis.

"President Arroyo keeps exhorting everyone to scrimp and save, and has even told Filipinos to make do with food coupons instead of demanding jobs and housing," Beltran said in a statement. "But now we hear that the government is willing and even eager to absorb P200 billion in debts. Where are the funds going to come from to pay off these debts but from taxpayers?

"It's evident that all these austerity measures are directed toward paying off debts the Filipino people did not benefit from—debts that are highly anomalous and have even yet to be comprehensively audited."

Administration Sen. Manuel Roxas II likewise called for a thorough accounting of the debts the government would remove from Napocor's shoulders.

Before the debts could be absorbed, Roxas said a full public accounting on how the debts were incurred, why the money was borrowed, and for what exact purposes the liabilities were contracted should be completed.

Malacañang last week issued Executive Order No. 370 which allowed the national government to directly assume P200 billion of Napocor's debts.

The order was issued in connection with Section 32 of Republic Act No. 9136, or the Electric Power Industry Reform Act of 2001 (Epira), giving the national government the power to directly assume up to P200 billion of the state firm's obligations.

It took effect Oct. 15, immediately after it was published in a newspaper of general circulation. No announcement, other than the newspaper ad, was made about it.

Under the EO, the Department of Finance, in consultation with the Department of Budget and Management and the Commission on Audit, will work out the details on how to go about the debt absorption.

These details will include identifying the specific debts to be assumed, making arrangements with Napocor, the Power Sector Assets and Liabilities Management Corp. and the national government; the proper treatment and recording of the transactions; and the actual implementation of the debt assumption.

Fitch Ratings questions RP over pace of fiscal reforms

By Doris C. Dumla

A VISITING team from the credit ratings firm Fitch Ratings has questioned government economic managers on the slow pace of fiscal reforms, rising inflation and shrinking current account surplus.

Amando Tetangco, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas deputy governor, yesterday said the London-based ratings firm asked about the progress of the new fiscal measures the Arroyo administration had committed to shortly after it secured a fresh six-year term after the last elections.

Fitch Ratings earlier warned that the Philippines was running the risk of a further downgrade of its sovereign credit rating.

The ratings firm, whose biggest concerns were the government's sagging tax revenues and the deep-seated financial debt problems of the power sector, has given the country 18 months to pass the legislative measures needed to shore up tax revenues and ease public sector debt woes.

"It was about the same concerns that were raised during the roadshow," Tetangco said, citing queries on fiscal reforms.

During last month's global roadshow held across Asia, Europe and the United States, investors aired their anxiety over key Philippine legislative measures and the timetable set for their passage.

On the monetary side, Tetangco said Fitch Ratings also asked about the BSP's prospects on inflation amid runaway oil prices.

BSP Assistant Governor Diwa Guinigundo, who attended the separate technical meetings with Fitch Ratings, said the monetary authorities had explained that the 4-5 percent target range for this year and the next would be breached due to supply bottlenecks.

"But we told them that, starting the middle of 2005, we'll go back to the 4-5 percent target range," Guinigundo said.

Fitch Ratings likewise asked the BSP about its outlook on the balance of payments, given the slowdown in the current account surplus from about $1 billion last year to about $1.5 billion this year.

The BOP measures foreign exchange transactions between the economy and the rest of the world. Its major components are the current account and the capital and financial account.

The current account records trade in goods and services as well as transfers while the capital and financial account records loan transactions, investment flows, short-term capital and other related items.

Guinigundo said the lower current account surplus this year was due to the rise in imports and did not mean that the economy was becoming less competitive in global trade.

The rise in import bill was affected by the skyrocketing oil prices, although Guinigundo said the adverse impact on trade versus projections was only about $400 million for this year.

the new program.

"We are not saying the competitor doesn't have what we have," according to the Globe president. "But this is a program different from anything that was previously launched. We would like to use the mobile phone in ways that have never been possible."

G-Cash would allow Globe subscribers to send and receive the new currency. They may also use it to buy goods, eat in restaurants.

G-Cash is different from the mobile phone load. G-Cash could be loaded in accredited centers and banks or could be transferred via overseas or domestic remittance. Globe's currency could also be transferred from another subscriber.

Globe said that the program followed requirements against money laundering and was adequately secured against theft and hacking. If a phone with G-Cash was stolen, Globe said a subscriber could call 7392882.

"This is a program where we don't have a specific target market," said Ablaza. "We are hoping transactions will surpass the level of the Auto Load Max. We want to create a whole new ecosystem of texting and transferring value."

According to Gonzalez, of the $350 million in capital expenditures programmed this year, about $200 million would be on the network rollout.

Ablaza said the company would roll out at least another 1,000 cellular sites next year to expand its coverage. Globe is targeting to end the year with about 3,600 cellular sites, allowing it to cover 85 percent of the population.

Globe's network could support a subscriber base of more than 13 million. Fierce rival Smart Communications Inc. already had more than 4,000 mobile sites, allowing it to cover more than 90 percent of the population.

He said Globe's wider network coverage helped the company sign up more subscribers from the provinces.

Ablaza said Globe would also explore regional ventures in partnership with Singapore Telecom.

SingTel owns 40 percent of Globe.

SingTel said it would bring the G-Cash concept to its other markets in Asia. SingTel has 6 telecom companies in the region. Globe said it would announce third quarter results on Oct. 28.

DOTC taps PPA earnings to put up maritime hubs, upgrade facilities

By Clarissa S. Batino

THE DEPARTMENT of Transportation is tapping the earnings of the Philippine Ports Authority worth P550 million to put up new port facilities and upgrade old ones in strategic areas in the country.

The move is aimed at facilitating the swift transport of farm goods and other products to reduce the costs of transporting them.

Transport Secretary Leandro Mendoza said the government was planning to put up seaports in the western, central and eastern nautical highway. These areas are not fully covered by the roll-on, roll-off or Roro system. Specifically, the hubs are intended to be put up in the Mindoro-Marinduque-Romblon-Palawan (Mimaropa) corridor; the West Mindanao link covering the islands of Zamboanga, Basilan, Jolo and Tawi-Tawi, and the Northeastern Luzon link including Real, Baler, Bilasag, Maconacon, Dingalan, Casiguran in Quezon Province; Palanan, and San Vicente in Cagayan.

Transport Assistant Secretary Roberto Castanares said the cost of putting up the facilities and of upgrading existing ports was placed at about P550 million.

"Most of the funds will have to come from the PPA," according to Castanares in an interview.

The transport department said a number of ports were scheduled for upgrade or rehabilitation.

These are the ports along the Matamog-Sorsogon-Bulan-Culasi connection; Tacloban-Palomon-Bogo-Hagnaya-Sta. Fe-Bantayan-Cadiz-Concepcion-Culasi; the Lipata-San Ricardo-Padre Burgos-Maasin-Tapal-Tagbilaran-Argeo-Santander-Dumaguete link, and the Manila-Coron-Taytay-Cuyo-San Juan de Buenavista-Iloilo-Bacolod-San Carlos-Toledo-Cebu-Jetafe-Guindulman-Gunsilban-Balingao-Cagayan de Oro corridor.

Mendoza said that steps were being taken to ensure that the country's ports were safe and adequately secured.

Mendoza said the PPA was not among the attached agencies of the DOTC that would be allowed to raise fees. He said the PPA should even bring down its fees to help reduce the prices of commodities being transported from the provinces to the other parts of the country.

The PPA earlier said it would revisit plans to hike fees and charges by 20 percent, which, once implemented, could raise the agency's collection by about P180 million each year.

The PPA is tasked to operate government-owned ports, help regulate the maritime industry and put up more ports to improve the flow of goods and services.

The maritime agency is one of the government's big revenue earners in terms of fees collected from every foreign vessel that dock in local ports and dues paid by private port operators. It also charges terminal fees to persons and vehicles boarding Roro.

The port agency reported a net income of P1.22 billion in the first six months or 33 percent higher than year-ago level. The PPA said it was targeting to double its profit this year to P1.6 billion from a little over P800 million last year.

PRSP holds first GMM after elections

AFTER several months of inactivity, the Public Relations Society of the Philippines held its first general membership meeting Oct. 11 at the Club Filipino in Greenhills, San Juan.

The GMM was attended by members and guests who signified their intention to join and be active in the premier public relations organization in the country.

The PRSP election was held Sept. 17 and the new officers were inducted into office Sept. 22 by Sen. Fred S. Lim at the Senate of the Philippines.

The new officers and directors are Jones T. Campos, president, of Globe Telecom; Joel D. Lacsamana, VP-internal, of Manila Water; Dante M. Veloso, VP-external, of Creative Points International; Lou S. de Guzman, secretary, of CAP Inc.; Angel G. Doble, treasurer, of PNB; Dulce Festin Baybay, internal auditor, of ABS-CBN Foundation; Maloli Espinosa Manalastas, director/PRO, of ABS-CBN; Rocky G. Dimaculangan, director, of Ayala Land; and Rochelle G. Hilario, director, of Asian Terminals.

In his inaugural speech, newly elected

PRSP president Campos pledged transparency, professionalism, integrity, relevance and excellence. He also stated that by the leadership of the current board, he hopes that the public relations profession is on track to its "golden years".

For his part, Dante Velasco announced that PRSP is not holding a national PR congress this year. Instead, the Society will launch the Anvil Awards within October. The Anvil Awards is the "Oscars" of the public relations profession. It will be co-chaired by Joel Lacsamana and Dulce Festin Baybay.

'Katsuo' festival at Nishiki

EDSA Shangri-La, Manila's Nishiki features the smallest but most flavorful type of tuna during its Katsuo (Bonito Fish) Festival from Oct. 20 to 31. Tobiu flies as far as 100 meters, making it difficult to catch. This is why it is considered as one of Japan's most sought-after seafood, popularly enjoyed as sashimi and shiyaki (grilled with salt). Among the popular ways to prepare bonito is dried and shaved into thin flakes called hanakatsuo or as sushii and sashimi. Nishiki's chef Kenzo also prepares bonito farasu yaki (grilled with ponzu sauce), iazaki (medium grilled with garlic and leeks), mentaiko (with cod fish roe) and misoshibu (bonito miso soup), available for lunch and dinner. Nishiki is at the mezzanine of Edsa Shangri-La, Manila. For inquiries and reservations, call 634-7373 or 633-8888 locals 2738/2739.

1st confab of campus ministries

MSGR. Vicente D. Bauson, the Archdiocesan Campus Ministry director and chief operating officer of the First National Convention of Campus Ministries from Oct. 20 to 22 at the Grand Ballroom of the Westin Philippine Plaza, feels that the heart of any campus ministry is to be able to foster and sustain dynamic and creative communities of faith on campus. With the theme "Transforming Schools into Faith Communities", the convention aims to initiate a movement that shares the same vision of providing an alternative environment to the students and other campus sectors by transforming schools into faith communities and to create a networking facilitative to the growth and sustainability of this movement. Initiated by the Campus Ministry of the Archdiocese of Manila and the University of Santo Tomas, this two-and-a-half-day convention will feature internationally known speakers and personages. For convention information, call the Campus Ministry secretariat at 735-3390 or 735-6589.

Public librarians seminar-workshop

SOME 400 to 500 public librarians from the provinces, cities, municipalities, and barangays all over the Philippines will attend the National Seminar Workshop on "Issues and Trends of Philippine Public Librarianship" at the National Library Auditorium from Oct. 20 to 23. Held annually, the seminar-workshop lines up a battery of speakers on Oct. 20 and 21 with Undersecretary Fortunato T. de la Peña of DOST giving the keynote address. On Oct. 22, National Library Director and key officials will hold a meeting with member-libraries of the Public Libraries Information Network (Publin). Oct. 23 is reserved for the annual book allocations of the National Library to selected public libraries.

RP hosts Asian internal auditors' meet

THE PHILIPPINES will host the 5th Annual Convention of the Asian Confederation of Institutes of Internal Auditors from Oct. 20 to 22 in Shangri-La Macau, Cebu. This is the first time that the region's top internal audit organization chose the country as venue for its annual meet. All audit and audit-related practitioners are invited to attend the conference, with its theme, "Striking A Balance", which promises to have more than 15 speakers from Asia handling over 18 audit-related topics. The convention is a collaboration of the Institute of Internal Auditors Philippines (IIAP), Information Systems Audit and Control Association (Isaca), Association of Certified Fraud Examiners (Acfe) and the Association of Government Internal Auditors (Agia). For more details, look for Sunshine at the IIAP Secretariat at 812-2754 or 813-2553.

After building stars, director's new goal is to help build a nation

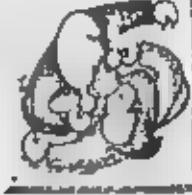

By JR Bustamante

EVERYONE tells her that she is chasing an impossible dream, but that does not discourage this strong-willed lady from pursuing her mission of character building in a nation guided by wrong moral values. Heidi Sison, or fondly known as "Direk Heidi," is the founding chairman of Character Building Foundation, Inc. (CBFI). She believes that positive character of honesty, love, hard work and trust are the foundations of a strong nation. "Change will start from within each individual and eventually project itself into a transformed nation. We hope that this consciousness will spread to each Filipino. When that happens, we will become the most prosperous nation," proclaims Sison.

Character building

CBFI is a non-stock, non-profit organization that advocates strong positive Filipino character as the foundation of a progressive nation through education. It was formed by a group of professionals from the public and private sectors, concerned with the Filipino's inner potential to aid in the nation's growth. The foundation aims to promote positive Filipino values for nation building through various projects such as "tele-dramas," painting contests, children's art making contests, roundtable discussions, seminars, open community plaza storytelling, and other forms of communication.

"Character is what you do when no one is looking at you" is Sison's simple definition of human character. With her work in the foundation, she has taken it upon herself to work hard for an exhausting, thankless job, which would show results, if at all, only after a long time. But, Sison is a woman that has been through it all and seen it all and now, she feels that it is time to give back. She feels she has been gifted with talent, which she believes should be utilized for the good of the nation. Through her craft, she leads people to the kind of Filipino we ought to be—hopeful, committed and visionary. Her tool in achieving this is media. In the span of her career, she never lost sight of the fact that media has a mission to fulfill.

One of the most competent, highly educated directors in local TV, Sison is a legend in the world of entertainment having directed long-running hits such as "Seeing Stars with Joe Quirino," "Student CanTeen," "Flor De Luna" and many others. A notable trademark of her directorial skills is her one-take shoots. "I always get my scene on the first take to capture the spontaneity and avoid unnecessary production expenses" claims this no-nonsense, practical lady. Her style is straightforward and that is why she has gained so much respect from the industry from her producers to her celebrity talents who know that professionalism is a must if you will work under her. Her cast knows better than to neglect studying their lines before a take. She has this reputation of sending a person packing if it is apparent that a talent is not prepared and is the cause for time delay.

Track record

Her list of directional accomplishments is so extensive and varied that the following is only partial: musical shows such as "Carina," "Nelda at the Hilton," "It's Me, Genasay"; movie for television such as "Lihim, Isang Landas, Isang Bansang"; special events such as "First International Fil Festival," "Manglapus, the Artist," "Alay sa Pangulo"; beauty pageants such as "Mutya ng Pilipinas '81," "Miss Asia Quest '81"; documen-ties such as "The Life and Death of John E. Kennedy, Bakid Bitayin", "A Doctor and a Gentleman"; game shows such as "Paligsahan sa Dos," "Tic-Tac-Toe," "Halo-Halo Special"; special assignments such as "Damayan," "Tele-Aranian," "Puerto Real Evenings"; Talk Show "Eyewitness" and a radio show "Direk Heidi." During her twenties, she was already labeled a queen of noontime shows.

Values-oriented projects

Sison has many values-oriented projects up her sleeve but she needs a lot of support to pursue this. She plans to revive her talk show "Eyewitness," which focuses on the good side of celebrities and personalities, and take her ongoing "Mga Kuwento ni Direk Heidi" public storytelling plays to the next level.

When it comes to creativity, this woman has an endless supply, but admittedly, she falls short in the marketing and financial aspect of the projects. She prays that one day she will get the support she needs to pursue all her projects for building a new nation. "I cannot do everything but I can do something." She believes that the time to act is now. "These are the times that shape the character of a person. Today, we have the opportunities to create statesmen. Positive change must be permanent, not cosmetic."

SISON

How can we sell more of our stuff?

DEAR WW: I'm feeling that our product isn't selling like it should be selling. We've tried everything to boost sales and nothing works. Any suggestions? No Go

Your e-mail reminded me of Tony Alleyne. He tried to sell his apartment for $2 million. Why so pricey? Alleyne spent 10 years creating a detailed model of the "Star Trek" starship Enterprise. It has a life-sized transporter control, a gigantic warp core drive, an infinity mirror and voice-activated lighting.

WORKING WOUNDED
Needless to say the apartment appealed to a limited number of buyers. Unfortunately, many of us are as myopic as Mr. Alleyne and needlessly limit the market for our products. I've listed some strategies below to help you get a better perspective on your product and how you can increase its sales. For more strategies, check out Seth Godin's book "Purple Cow" (Portfolio, 2002).

Can you improve the product? If sales are lagging, chances are that it's more than just a lack of customer awareness. So it's important to always start by exploring what you can do to make the product better. I always like to ask the "magic wand" question of key customers. "If you had a magic wand, what would you change about our product or us?" Make it easy for customers to give you feedback, this is the cheapest focus group you'll ever work with.

Can you copy something done in another industry? Breakthroughs seldom come by copying what someone else in your industry is doing. It's far more common to get insight from somewhere else. So take the time to pay attention to what's happening in industries far removed from yours. A simple way to do this is to seek out newspaper and magazine articles on businesses outside of your industry. Do this regularly and I'll guarantee that you'll get ideas that no one else in your industry has come up with.

Can you zig while others in your industry zag? Every industry has its sacred cows. Take the airline industry. For the longest time their business model was to soak the last minute business flyers with huge prices on tickets. Recently, they learned that by lowering their prices they actually sell more tickets and make more money. What are the "givens" in your industry and how can you challenge them?

How can you make it easy for your customers to talk up your service? It never ceases to amaze me how little most businesses do to encourage their customers to talk up their products. For example, as part of your service can you print up a report on your company and product that a customer can show to their friends or colleagues?

There are times when a new ad campaign is the best way to move more products. But more often it's just as valuable for you to take a hard look in the mirror. And it doesn't have to be one of those "Star Trek" infinity mirrors, any old one will do. Live long and prosper.

Here are the results from a recent workingwounded.com/ABCnews.com online ballot. Which Queen song title best describes your company's products or services?

— "Death on Two Legs," 25 percent

— "We Will Rock You," 34.8 percent

— "The Show Must Go On," 40.1 percent

'What can we do with corruption in government?'

By Tita Datu Puangco

I READ with disgust the exposés on corruption in the military in the Philippine Daily Inquirer. It looks like corruption has become so endemic to our culture and our country.

Unlike other employees, I am not considering going abroad to work. I have four young children. How can I, as a parent, make sure my children do not get afflicted with this very contagious disease called corruption? I work in a multinational company. We have systems that work to guarantee honest and transparent transactions. Can our government not learn from the best practices in the private sector? Whenever we have regional conferences, I am proud because, Filipinos are so intelligent and diligent but we appear helpless in the face of graft and corruption. What can we do to move forward as a nation on this deplorable disease?

Disgusted Citizen

FOR THE ANXIOUS PERSON AT WORK

Recently, I attended a one-day meeting convened by Laiko representing the Catholic Laity. The church is gearing up to send qualified volunteers to act as observers in the bidding processes undertaken by government at both national and local levels. This project, when put into motion, is indeed commendable. It is meant to check a flawed bidding and procurement system. A more strategic move is for the government to seriously go into e-procurement where all bids are made transparent to all bidders and to the general public.

What can we do to ensure our children do not end up embracing corruption in the future? We as parents can sensitize them to ethical behavior. For example, one rule is not to touch dishonest pesos. This means giving back to the last centavo change due to a person. We also have to go out of our way to make sure our children in school do not spend beyond their means. Recently, I read a survey that showed that many students have the propensity to borrow or go in debt to classmates because of consumerism or even gambling.

Then, we can conduct ethics seminars in all offices. When a person encounters an ethical dilemma, he or she must know the steps to take to solve the problem. He or she must be able to raise the issue with the superior and get enlightened advice. We also know that corruption thrives when people in the private sector, for example, bribe to get juicy government contracts. They go out of their way to understand the weaknesses of people in authority and craft tempting offers that are difficult to refuse.

I am sure our readers will have other suggestions. Please write and we will share to our readers your ideas. Meantime, let us keep faith in the ability of the Filipino to rise above his or her greed and selfishness to move towards honest and patriotic action. Thanks for your letter.

MAKING his father proud, Llave built his thriving business from scratch.

Text by Charles E. Buban

A TOY Llave grew up around cars and has been "dressing them up" since he was a teenager.

At 15 he had his own Toyota Cressida modified, body repainted and lowered while the audio system setup along with the rest of the car's interior personalized.

While still in college, he entered his first car competition where he won best in paint during the 1993 Trans Sport Show for his green Toyota Corolla entry.

This got Llave started in joining car show competitions year after year where he consistently win awards while wowing the crowd with his extraordinary designs.

Serious cash

"But it was not until my graduation in '95 that I decided to turn this infatuation into serious cash," remembered Llave.

Since he needed to build a name for his start-up business, he initially invited his close friends to entrust to him their most valued cars.

That was how A-Toy Bodykits came to be, initially painting (changing colors) and modifying cars (in 1997) for Llave's "trusting" customers.

"I knew that success will come later if one successfully build loyalty from these close friends who could afterward be advocates for my business," he said.

Top rated

Indeed, from a network of highly satisfied friends, he soon received referrals ranging from movie and television celebrities to politicians.

That turned A-Toy Bodykits from a tiny

LLAVE and Llason often join forces to come up with winning designs.

His wild imagination helped him well in coming up with winning designs

In fact, the company has now established its own brand of locally made aero body kits that are being exported to the United States.

Seeing these credentials, a number of locally based car manufacturers including GM, Honda, Hyundai, Isuzu, and Nissan, made A-Toy Bodykits one of their original equipment manufacturers (OEM) suppliers.

Although Llave had no formal training in designing eye-catching body kits, his years of working on or around cars and his wild imagination helped him well in coming up with winning designs.

He usually does his conceptualization in his restoration and body painting workshop on West Avenue (Quezon City) or in his modification shop on Gilmore Street, Quezon City and sometimes in his Tireboy showroom on Sto. Domingo Street (Sta. Mesa Heights) also in Quezon City.

"I don't stop from learning and discovering new things," he said. "I regularly attend car design seminars and motor shows abroad to hone my skills," he added.

And if he is not attending seminars and car shows, Llave is usually found in front of his computer browsing on car manufacturers' web pages and various car clubs.

"You never know when and where an inspiration for a great design would hit you," he said.

Not alone

When it comes to coming up with award-winning entries, he has a network of friends who supply him with the necessary parts and

Among them are Sammy Llason of Wheel Gallery who sells exotic magwheels and tires; Arvin Llason who supplies him with performance shock absorbers; and Benedict Go, where Llave gets high-intensity discharge bulbs for his works.

"We're like a family here. Each one of us has something that would complement each other's line of business," said Llason who considers himself as Llave's father-like figure after Llave's father passed away in 1995.

Usual partner

Llason, who markets highly rated Concept One, MKW and Bazo brands of alloy wheels as well as high-performance Nitto SUV, usually partners with Llave to come up with projects they both enter in local car competitions.

"The latest is the customized Ford F-150 that won top honors in the recently concluded Sport Truck and Custom Car Show at the SM Megamall," boasted Llave.

The F-150's stunning exterior is wrapped in a specially designed widened body by A-Toy Bodykits while Llason fitted it with a massive 24 x 10-inch chrome MKW mag wheels.

"This truck represents the teamwork of the best custom builders in the automotive aftermarket industry. When good quality products are fused together with the right idea, it is really hard to beat," said Llason.

Although Llave's body kits are expensive—a CR-V's would cost around P150,000 while a Lincoln Navigator conversion kit for new Ford Expedition would fetch around P450,000—he insisted his price tag is justified.

"I pay attention to details. Not many of my counterparts here in the country realize that when it comes to body kits, everything must be considered. Safety is just one of them," he reasoned out.

For instance, he revealed that the bumpers he designed feature crumple zones that prevent other parts of the body kit as well as the engine itself from being damaged in the event of a collision.

"It takes a lot of measuring in the computer and actual testing on our workshop to come up with such a design parameter," he explained.

"I think I will only be satisfied when my customer tells me the job I did looks great and performs excellently," Llave said. "I will always make sure that they are happy with what they paid for, and I will always be glad to help them in every way that I can. These are my promises to them," he added.

Cheers, jeers in eye-popping Z4

A bus stared, while some pointed at the car and smiled in appreciation. One jeepney driver even went to the extent of asking what car I was driving. I rolled my window down coolly and replied "BMW Z4" like it was nothing.

But of course, inside, I was shaking with excitement. I never had this kind of attention before in a car. And my top was still up. Imagine the fanfare I would get if I let my top down.

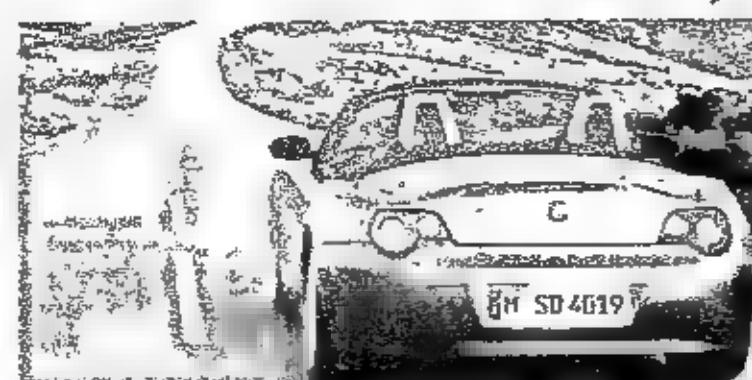

The soft-top wasn't very good insulation from the sound of the engine. But then, I thought, maybe BMW makers wanted Z4 owners to hear the rumble of the engine.

The next few days saw me drive the Z4 to high-class locales and functions: to Eagle Ridge Golf and Country Club in Cavite; to an afternoon press conference with P1 superstar Fernando Alonso in Intramuros; and to a night meeting with fellow motoring reporters at the Speedzone at The Fort. All of these trips, however, were done with me under the protective shell of the roof. I just wasn't ready to get exposed.

Bringing the top down

It would take a veteran colleague to persuade me to bring the top down: a hitchhiker by the name of Aris Ilagan, Manila Bulletin's resident evil, er, defense and motoring reporter. Aris implored me to "feel the wind, feel the elements." I thought he was going to faint, so I panic I brought the roof down. In retrospect, and in between guffaws, I remembered Aris just repeated what BMW Philippines president Dr. Joerg Breuer told me in an earlier interview: That whenever anyone would drive a Z4 (or any convertible for that matter), one has to let the top down to "feel the wind, feel the elements."

And so the top was down, and there was nothing I could do but nervously enjoy the moment. The next few minutes saw me and Aris taking in all that Roxas Boulevard, Intramuros and Edsa could muster: the smoke, the stares, the smart-aleck remarks, and a few appreciative shouts of "ang ganda mo, miss!" (though with that last remark it was Aris who shouted "thank you!" back).

The attention was discomforting. I wanted so much to bring the cover back up, but we were moving in the middle of the road, so the cover wouldn't activate.

Noticeable about the steering wheel was its character of stiffening during higher speeds, and its softening when maneuvering during low speeds and parking.

Rainaway winner

Feature- and comfort-wise, this Z4 is a runaway winner over the earlier Z3 she drove two years ago on the way to Baguio. Z4 is said to have lost weight but not light enough to sacrifice the rigidity of the vehicle. BMW officials said they have made the Z4's body extra-strong yet extra-light, and has been designed from the outset as a genuine roadster. The specs sheet and drive feel indicate torsional stiffness of 14,500 Nm/degree, exceeding the torsional stiffness of the Z3 (5,600 Nm/degree) more than twice.

BMW boasts that never before has a convertible or roadster offered torsional stiffness of this standard, brilliantly solving the conflict of interest between saloon-like smoothness and vibration control, on the one hand, and a dynamic, sporting suspen-

Of course, the remaining stiffness of the Z4 could still be unnerving for those who want an everyday car. But to put things in perspective, in this part of the world, the Z4 is not an everyday car. It is meant to be taken out only occasionally. And, based on my experience, owners should see the wisdom of choosing where you drive it, lest your status be questioned.

For example, during the trip to Eagle Ridge, our group decided to stop by a roadside carinderia eatery along Aguirado Highway. Residents there kept on asking what the Z4 was doing near the carinderia.

Three of my motoring colleagues remarked on the similarity of the handling of the Z4 with the BMW 3 series, with its go-kart like response. Some even said the Z4 felt like a BMW 325 M-Sport.

BMW says that while the Z4 has been carried over in its basic configuration from the 3 Series, the suspension has modified the setup, focusing on even more dynamic handling than, say, the suspension of the 3 Series coupé. The perfect balance of weight on the two axles provides all the ingredients for harmonious behavior on the road. A further factor is rear-wheel drive offering decisive benefits particularly in a sports car—for example by keeping the steering absolutely free of drive forces, ensuring superb steering precision and providing absolutely clear feedback.

If you're used to the attention and all that power in your hands, then the price you pay for all that (P3.7 million for the automatic transmission, P3.6 for the MT) would be worth it. In five days, I finally understood why it was so hard for Frodo to let go of his "precious."

DSC with DTC

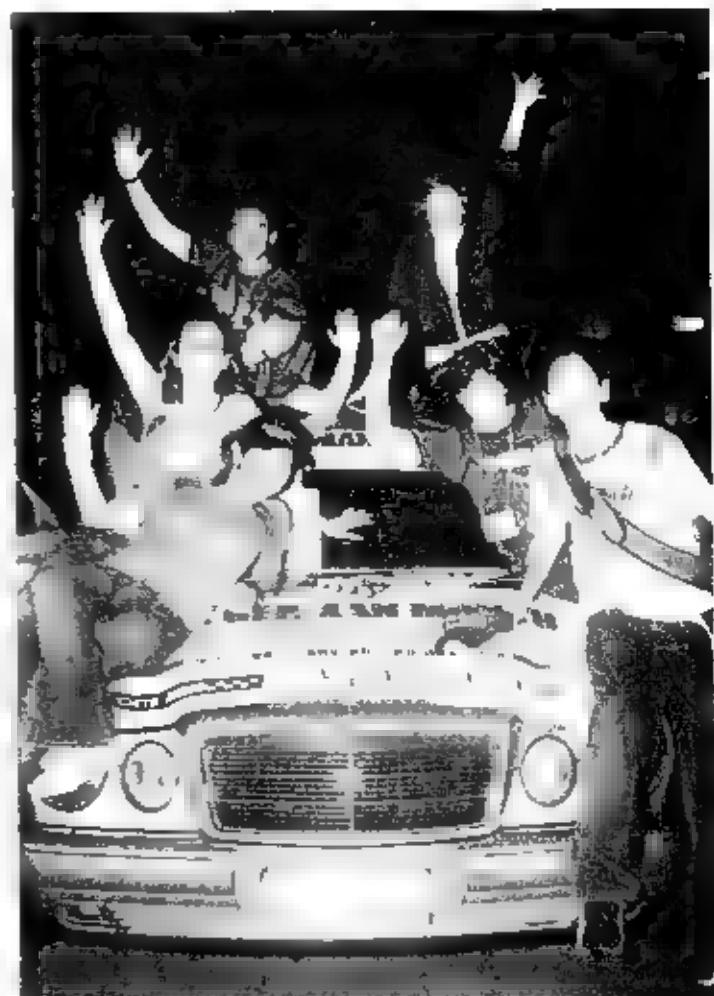

The first thing that came into mind when this writer saw the Dynamic Stability Control even with agile handling on the Z4 is, "What is a DSC button still doing on this car?" The answer from Z4 makers is plain and simple: even though the suspension offers safety reserves so sufficient, this safety system is only required in really dangerous situations and not as some kind of enhancement for the suspension.

A further important point is that the new DTC (Dynamic Traction Control) allows the Z4 driver to adjust the DSC to his personal dynamic driving requirements. At the touch of a button, DTC provides an increase in slip control on the rear wheels geared to actual driving conditions. Fitted with DTC, the Z4 offers the same agility as a sports car featuring a "classic" limited-slip differential, without forfeiting the usual DSC functions under extreme conditions.

How safe is the Z4? BMW says that the backbone for the high standard of passive safety offered to the driver and passenger is the extremely stable body structure using high-strength steel wherever appropriate. The A-pillars form a rollbar at the front supplemented by two steel rollbars behind the seats. The driver and passengers are protected in the Z4 by four airbags fitted as standard.

Is the BMW Z4's form appealing to just a certain age group? Not so. In my experience, everyone I knew who had a look and feel of the drive had nothing but praises for the Z4. Everyone, from twenty-something neophyte journalists to BMW Z Club members 60 and above, were magnetized by the Z4's handsome appeal.

If you're used to the attention and all that power in your hands, then the price you pay for all that (P3.7 million for the automatic transmission, P3.6 for the MT) would be worth it. In five days, I finally understood why it was so hard for Frodo to let go of his "precious."

Mazda3 looks good, drives good

IT ISN'T often that a car gets to be described as "guapo" by people soon after its intro. But this early in the game—it was launched in Manila only a month ago—that flattering adjective has stuck to the Mazda3.

One glance at the Mazda3 and you'll know why. This four-door compact sedan was designed and built in such a way that it looks like a snazzy sports coupé befitting the "zoom zoom zoom" mantra of its manufacturer. Everything about the stylish, low-slung Mazda3 suggests speed, strength and muscle. It awakens the passion for adventure and a yearning to hit the road just for the sheer joy of driving it.

Sold out

Since the 3 is offered with either a 2.0- or a 1.6-liter engine, buyers with no budget limitations would naturally opt for the top-of-the-line 2.0-liter (P925,000) that comes with a power sunroof, black leather seats, 17-inch aluminum alloy wheels and a lip-type rear spoiler as standard equipment. In fact, as I write this the 2.0-liter Mazda3 is sold out and there is a backlog of waiting buyers. Suddenly all the other cars in the same market segment look dated.

With the 2.0-liter so much in demand, Mazda Philippines had no demo unit for me to test-drive for a week recently except a 1.6 model. Surprisingly enough, I found the infinity black 1.6L V Mazda3 even sexier than the petrol red 2.0L R. And that I and other motoring journalists took turns driving around the sprawling Eagle Ridge Golf and Country Club in Cavite the other weekend for the Car of the Year project. With its honeycomb mesh grille (as distinguished from the 2.0's slatted grille) and black woven seats with red accent, the black 1.6L V looks more dashing than the red 2.0-liter 3.

V and S

Given the soaring price of gasoline these days, if I were a buyer I would choose the 1.6 rather than the 2.0-liter even though the latter packs more horsepower (141 ps/6,500 rpm) than the former (105 ps/6,000 rpm). The Mazda3 1.6-liter is available in two trims: the V (P780,000) and the S (P719,000) which is the basic model. What the 1.6 V has that the 1.6 S does not have are six speakers (the S has only four), the red accent on the seats and door trims, front fog lamps, body color top bar on the black radiator grille, two SRS airbags (the S has only a driver-side one), ABS with EBD and brake assist. What's more, the V has 16-inch alloy wheels compared to the S's 15 and there is no infinity black S model sold here.

ON THE ROAD

The question naturally arises: Does the Mazda3 1.6 perform as good as it looks? Definitely yes, although one may occasionally long for the more potent, more torque (181 Nm/4,500 rpm) 2.0-liter engine, as when caroming up the hilly curves of the Tagaytay Highlands. Nonetheless, the twin-cam, 16-valve 1.6-liter engine with sequential valve timing mated to a 4-speed automatic transmission with "Activematic" or manual shift mode responds eagerly and the disc brakes front and rear are strong. The 1.6's max torque is 145 Nm/4,500 rpm.

Better

The 3 offers a firmer, more balanced ride and better handling than its predecessor, the Protege, thanks to a sport-tuned multilink suspension and the same basic chassis as that of the Ford Focus and the Volvo S40. (Both Mazda and Volvo, if you don't know it yet, are owned by Ford Motor Co.) Some experts prefer the hydraulic steering of the 1.6 Mazda3 to the electrohydraulic steering of the 2.0-liter and find the 1.6 engine smoother, quieter and more refined than the 2.0-liter engine.

Driving the Mazda3, whatever the powertrain, is a pleasure as the driver's seat is height adjustable and has lumbar support while all the other seats are just as comfortable. A tilt and telescopic-adjustable steering wheel with integrated audio controls is standard in all models. The 3's long 103.9-inch wheelbase and wide tread front and rear translate into more space for passengers, particularly in terms of shoulder room for rear seat occupants. The luggage area is big for a compact car and the 40/60 split rear seat backrests can be folded down to increase cargo space.

Upscale

The interior of the 3 is as impressive as its exterior, what with upscale ergonomics such as a 6-disc in-dash CD player with six speakers, central info display, hot red illumination for the logically positioned meters and ignition bezel, a big and roomy glove compartment, a center console box that can hold a dozen CDs, Euro-style side pocket with cupholder in every door, whiplash-reducing headrests and child-anchor seats.

Summing up, the eye-catching Mazda3 1.6L V redefines and sets a new pace for the 1.6-liter sports compact genre. It looks good, drives good and delivers exceptional value for its price.

Coty Update. Last weekend, members of the Car Awards Group tested SUVs and pickup trucks at Eagle Ridge, Cavite for the Car of the Year Philippines (Coty) project it has begun in cooperation with Automobile Association Philippines (AAP), the national auto club. Executive sedans, minivans, full-size SUVs, compact SUVs, luxury cars and subcompact cars are also scheduled for testing in the next few weekends, but not necessarily in that order.

IMPRESSIVE INTERIOR. Quality and substance with hot red illuminating the logically positioned meters.

CLEANER ENGINES - CLEANER AIR

"Breath in that fresh air..." is fast becoming a rare statement, especially in today's crowded urban environs. Smog, dust and unpleasant odors are what greet the nostrils of most city dwellers. Modern-day progress, while bringing about a more convenient way to live and work, has also brought new problems among them: threats to our environment. Air pollution, is one of the worst problems our planet has to face today.

The very popular motor vehicle however (cars, buses, trucks, etc.) is also one of the major sources of air pollution. According to the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), driving a motor vehicle is the single most polluting thing one can do. Motor vehicles emit millions of pollutants into the air each year. And with millions of motor vehicles on the road all over the world, it is no wonder that our air is heavily polluted.

Tracing the Emissions

While motor vehicles are designed to provide convenience to the user by making travel faster and safer, the internal combustion engine used to power most motor vehicles has its downside: the emission of harmful gases. Motor vehicles emit three major types of pollutants: hydrocarbons, nitrogen oxides and carbon monoxide. All three are by-products of the internal combustion process of different stages and all three also pose dangers to human and environmental health. Then there is carbon dioxide—a major cause of global warming. And while manufacturers have fitted their vehicles with pollution control devices such as exhaust gas recirculators and catalytic converters, motor vehicle travel has doubled over the past 20 years.

Reducing Pollution

While it is a given that internal combustion engines emit harmful gases into the air, this doesn't mean however that nothing can be done about it. STP, a leading manufacturer of quality car care products, offers a line of fuel additive system to help lessen harmful vehicle emissions and clean up the air: STP Gas Treatment; STP Fuel Injector and Carburetor Cleaner; STP Octane Booster; and STP Diesel Fuel Treatment.

At the heart of the engine lies the fuel system, consisting of such vital parts as the fuel tank (storage); fuel line; carburetor or fuel injectors (in today's modern engines) and the combustion chamber. Its basic function is the storage of fuel in the vehicle, filtering out of particulates, delivery of fuel into the intake air system and the mixing of air and fuel to provide the most efficient combustion in the engine. Just like any mechanical device however, the fuel system is also prone to wear and tear over time, the most common being deposits in its various parts: Fuel Injector/Carburetor deposits, Intake Valve Deposits and, Combustion Chamber Deposits. All these can lead to loss of power, engine knock or "pinging" (detonation) and increased exhaust emission.

STP Gas Treatment: Specially formulated to fight harmful carbon, gum and varnish deposits in the fuel system, STP Gas Treatment contains "active additive" ingredients such as a powerful dispersant/detergent, rust inhibitors and, corrosion inhibitors which combine to provide optimum protection against deposits. At the same time, it helps to remove carburetor, as well as intake valve and manifold deposits not to mention, preventing sticking of these deposits on metal parts which can easily lead to rust and corrosion. Moreover, it disperses water present in the fuel tank and provides a protective coating against rust.

STP Fuel Injector and Carburetor Cleaner: As the name implies, it helps to keep your vehicle's engine running smoothly by keeping the fuel system free of harmful deposits, helps prevent power loss and maintain optimum engine efficiency, thus avoiding hard starts, poor acceleration and rough idle.

STP Octane Booster: A 2-in-1 formulation that boosts fuel economy and enhances engine performance. More than this, STP Octane Booster restores lost horsepower, removes deposits, which cause knock and pinging, and prevents hard starts.

For owners of diesel-powered vehicles, however, don't fret. STP Diesel Fuel Treatment gives the same benefits as STP gasoline fuel system products. The petroleum-based solution of hydrocarbon dispersant and proprietary diesel fuel additives acts as an ester and non-alcohol detergent/dispersant which helps prevent the formation of gum and residue (deposits) in the fuel delivery system while at the same time, its corrosion inhibitors aid in ensuring a clean fuel system, even against rust and corrosion. Moreover, a cold flow improver helps prevent fuel line gel and plugging of fuel filter lines in cold weather conditions.

Being Old-Fashioned Still Helps

While fuel additives aid in keeping engines running smoother and cleaner, nothing beats good old-fashioned preventive maintenance to ensure optimum performance and reliability. Poorly maintained vehicles can emit 10 times as much pollutants as well-maintained ones. So it wouldn't hurt to observe simple things like having engines tuned up regularly, regular changing of oil, air and fuel filters, checking to make sure tire pressure is correct (as incorrect tire pressure can increase fuel consumption and in turn, emissions), making sure your exhaust pipe remains smoke-free or just the basics.

More than keeping vehicles in top form, one can also try some other things like carpooling or taking public transport to reduce the number of vehicles on the road, traveling at moderate speed to save fuel (why be in a hurry right?), not stopping off the tank when filling up to avoid spills, opting for cleaner fuels (unleaded gasoline, low-sulfur diesel or when available, alternative fuels) and, buying less-polluting vehicles (low-emission vehicles and those equipped with catalytic converters).

So the next time you fill up that gas tank, why not pour in some STP fuel additives as well. Not only will you be keeping your car's engine dirt free, you will also keep the air pollution free. So we can all "breath in that fresh air..."

Mitsubishi is tops; Agbayani calls

NOW I know why the North Luzon Expressway has become so smooth as silk these days.

"We have adopted the international standard of smoothening our NLEX," said Ping de Jesus, top honcho of the Manila North Tollways Corp. that has been in charge of the rehabilitation of the main gateway to the North. "Once the project is over, you will be proud to tell the world that we are finally at par with the best expressways in the whole universe," he added.

Ping said the yardstick for a world-class highway is the IRI, or the International Roughness Index. Thus, when I told him about some stretches of the NLEX being redone and redone (as I said, I negotiate the NLEX very often now as I go home to my home province of Pangasinan every now and then), Ping said: "That's because they have not passed the

Al Mendoza

IRI, so the need to redo it all over again. Even the tiniest hump as small as a mole will not be allowed to dot our expressway. We are very strict in enforcing the agreement regarding world-class standards of the NLEX."

So there.

Keep on punching, Ping.

I keep saying here that late is never late. And so, here's a warm applause for Mitsubishi for topping the sales for commercial vehicles in September.

At the same time, Mitsubishi maintained its No. 2 position in the category of total industry sales.

"This is something that we at Mitsubishi take pride in," said Mitsubishi's Arlan Reyes. "In these times when competition is that tough, getting to be No. 1 is a no mean feat and we feel honored once more of the confidence bestowed upon us by our customers."

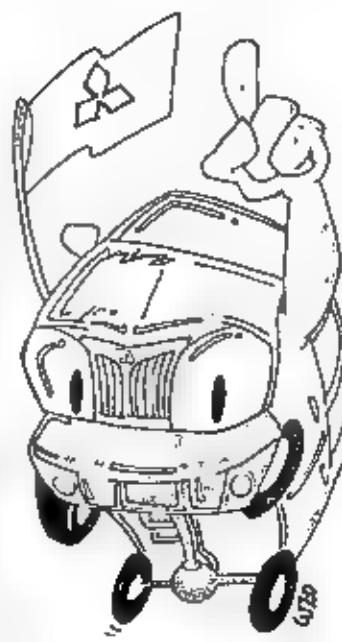

On the basis of the combined reports of the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines Inc. (Cami) and Truck Manufacturers Association (TMA), the Mitsubishi Motors Philippines led total commercial vehicles sales for September. It sold a total of 990 units of commercial vehicles composed of Adventure, L300, Space Gear, L200 pickups, Outlander and Pajero SUVs and Fuso Canter light trucks for a 22.2 percent market share of the total commercial vehicle category.

Toyota sold 929 units of commercial vehicles in September but it still managed to lead total overall sales with 2,029 units for a 27.3 percent market share due to its strong passenger car sales performance.

Mitsubishi's commercial vehicles in September dropped slightly by 3 percent versus August. Mitsubishi attributes the decline to the limited supply of its saleable units such as Adventure, L300 and Pajero models brought about by a shortage in local parts by its vendor.

Said Froilan Dythianquin, Mitsubishi Motors Philippines assistant vice president for marketing services: "We are still optimistic that the last quarter will produce better sales performance for the automotive industry due to seasonality, and the aggressiveness of all assemblers to carry out consumer-related promotions to make vehicles more affordable."

Froli added: "For MMPC, we project better sales this month due to improved availability of our Adventure models. We are also very pleased that sales of the Adventure models has been improving for the past few months and thus can only be credited to the Adventure's improved quality level and good overall value for money proposition."

Mitsubishi also reported that sales of its passenger cars sales, mainly composed of the Lancer 1.6-liter models, improved by 65 percent, with sales of 187 units versus 113 units in August. Both Toyota and Honda dominated the passenger car sales for September with sales of 1,093 units (36.5 percent market share) and 712 units (23.8 percent market share), respectively, due to its small passenger car sales.

Mitsubishi was able to keep its No. 2 position in overall year-to-date sales with total sales of 9,298 units, representing 14.4 percent market share. Toyota Motors Philippines led the industry with 21,912 units for a 33.9 percent market share. Honda was third with a total of 8,317 units for a 12.9 percent market share.

To the Mitsubishi guys that also include marketing wizard Mel Dizon, here's a glass to your continued good performance. Good sales will always mean there's hope in the land. And when there's hope, job security is assured—almost.

Cheers!

Gov. Victor Agbayani of Pangasinan called me up the day my piece about the utter state of disrepair of Canatan, the bridge of my youth that Public Works Secretary Soriquez built together with my late father, appeared here last week.

"The problem there is, your barangay council objected to our plan of repairing the bridge because they argued that closing the bridge for 60 days would cause them much inconvenience," the governor told me. "But don't worry. Our men are looking for a scheme that should lessen the number of days to repair the bridge."

Thank you, governor. As I said, it's been almost five years since that bridge fell "into a coma" and nothing has been done to save it. I hope that this time, the promise will be finally fulfilled.

And, yes, thank you also to lawyer Boy Sois, the provincial administrator, for ringing me up and then asking me up to the governor so that we could discuss the fate of Canatan.

Public service at its best, I must say. I just hope that this Christmas, that bridge, whose construction in the 60s had my father as the foreman, will be in tip-top shape again.

Right, Mr. Governor?

Beauty inside and out

Let's explore the realm of attractiveness—physical and otherwise. Read about a new pampering haven, witness how a cosmetics brand played fairy godmother to makeover-happy correspondents, learn about an organization that celebrates outstanding students and be inspired by the amazing achievements of the 20 finalists for our Best Student Volunteer search. Beauty starts skin deep, but it's up to us where to take it from there.

Fuss-free beauty haven

FOR the first time in, well, so long I've actually lost track, I am not allowing this column to revolve around my (usually) stress-laden existence.

Lord Gabor

Enough of fixating on my doomed under-eye circles, scuzz skin and lifeless hair. Today, I will talk about the highlight of my week: a relaxing visit to the salon that didn't just hide the evidence of my unforgivably low-maintenance beauty regimen (this is your cue to erase any mental images of me bathing in milk and honey in your head), but truly got my spirit revived as well.

As much as I love being treated like a princess with simultaneous pampering from head to toe, I am the last person you'd see breezing through salon doors on a regular basis since my frenetic schedule rarely allows it. Also, I have unknowingly conditioned myself to set a different kind of body clock: After two hours in beauty heaven, I inevitably get the itch to get off my butt and get back to the reality of deadlines and articles—probably my version of daylight “saving time.”

A few days ago, however, I chanced upon a brand-new kikay haven that was a stone's throw away from my cluttered desk. Such close proximity and convenience had me literally running to Metrowalk, the new restaurant strip along Ortigas, and the perfect location of the chic Azta Urban Salon, which I'd like to think is my favorite hangout of the moment.

Hip sanctuary

From the second I stepped through—okay, more like stumbled into (I was at the mercy of a giant work bag)—the salon's doors, I was greeted hello by siblings Jon and Gin Bantigue, two of the “masterminds” behind the modern beauty sanctuary right smack in the middle of one of Manila's bustling business districts. With both of them looking like they just stepped out of their togas, I knew I was within the four walls of what must be one of the city's hippest salons.

After three-second ocular, I quickly decided that I was definitely in BYT turf. Azta does not only have bright young things (PBA fresh face and former UAAP heartthrob Paul Artadi, stunning TV actress Tin Arnaldo) as Image models, but interiors reminiscent of a twenty-something's cool pad. Bright walls, neon-striped chairs, sleek furniture, and a shelf stocked with an entertaining mix of gossies and books—the place definitely felt like home to me!

After a short chat with Jon about the many common friends we shared (so Friendsier, I know), he introduced me to senior stylist Lolit, and told me that I would be “diagnosed” after some friendly Q&A. Gin informed me that Azta offers a unique twist to the usual salon menu by customizing every client's beauty package according to his/her lifestyle, preferences and budget.

Very ingenious—and very affordable, too! You can avail of a makeover for as low as P440, or go all out and revamp your entire look—and still end up saving money. You'll love filling up their customer information sheet, too. I felt like I was writing on one of those autograph books so much (they ask what kind of music you like and what you do on weekends), I almost scribbled down a dedication!

This was what earned the place major points for me I had yet to come across a salon with honest-to-goodness personalized services until I came to Azta.

After the whole getting-to-know-you-and-your-hair, Lolit immediately advised that I get a color change, a hair treatment and eyebrow threading. My good friend Grace, who was only too happy to get pampered, got herself a relaxing aromatherapy hair treatment and a blow dry, a mani-pedi, and a soothing foot spa.

Our verdict? My post-summer locks have faded into an obscure brown-gold, so I chose to go darker for the holidays (I want to do the classic pale skin-dark hair combo this year). Lolit used L'Oréal products to deepen my natural chocolate strands into the darkest brown possible, because raven hair could wash my complexion out, especially since I don't usually pile on the rouge.

Subtly striking results

I absolutely love the results—the effect was so subtly striking. One office mate told me, “Whatever it is you did to your hair, you look fab!” And another said, “Your hair shimmers brown.” My dehydrated hair also got a great boost of moisture after my hair treatment, and smelled heavenly after the process (no strong chemical odors!).

Did I mention the amazing scalp massage that went with it? I had to try hard not to drift off and leave Grace chatting with the wall! My brows are now also perfectly arched, thanks to Mariz who impeccably threaded off even the finest strands my tweezers couldn't tame.

Grace had the time of her life having hair brought back to life with the most fragrant treatment ever, and a “perfect” blow-dry that didn't leave her ‘do limp and lank, but naturally bouncy. Her tootsies and manos immensely enjoyed every second of their royal treatment as well. She proudly showed off her glowing (just take our word for it) toes in a pair of flip-flops immediately after!

After much deliberation, we still couldn't decide what we loved best about Azta. The services are efficiently and effectively carried out and the results are fantastic, the prices are every waller's best friend (a cut by a senior stylist will set you back an affordable P180), the location is just perfect (grab lunch right after your appointment or head straight to a gimmick after a pre-treaty session), and the place has that easygoing vibe devoid of pretentiousness and the snooty factor some high-end salons have (I was walking around with a towel on my head and having a kwento marathon with Grace without any trace of self-consciousness).

All in all, Azta Urban Salon is the place to go to for a fuss-free makeover with only the services you need, and the best choices for an afternoon of beautifying (or pogi-fying, for lack of a better term) with your buds. You're sure to leave the salon with a fab new look, a rejuvenated mind, and an unbelievably great time. Oh, and leftover cash for some coffee, too.

Azta Urban Salon is located at Unit 12 Metrowalk Commercial Complex (2/F), Meralco Avenue, Ortigas Center, Pasig City.

Makeover times seven

EYEBAGS the size of China, unkempt hair, oily faces and fried brain cells—that's the challenge that anyone who wanted to make over seven 2bU! correspondents/students had to face.

As writers, we usually keep out of the limelight and rarely include ourselves in photos, content with matching ourselfs to the rest of the team. The only thumb is to remain invisible in the story. So, it felt pretty weird writing a story about ourselves—with matching photos excepted. Despite the risk of being laughed at by every other person in the country, we eagerly volunteered for the makeovers, as we all desperately needed a new look. With the help of The Body Shop and Fred Penales of Lucy Britanico and Frankie Salon, we got the change that we deserved—hey, even if we stay out of the limelight, we still want to look good and feel good.

MAKEOVER/E2

Do you need a makeover?

2bU! and The Body Shop will be giving away 10 makeovers and two makeup packages to lucky readers. Just tell us which celebrity you want to makeover and why and e-mail your answers to contest2bU@inquirer.com.ph. Don't forget to include your photo, name, age, address and contact info.

Goldilocks in Greenbelt

By Gmeleen Faye B. Tomboc, 23

SEVEN of us 2bU! girls headed to Glorietta recently for a makeover.

At the Lucy Britan and Frankie Salon in Glorietta, I asked for curly hair, Carrie Bradshaw style. I lost myself in a book while Fred Penales and company styled away with a curling iron. Then, with new curls in tow, I felt like Goldilocks (with black hair) as I sashayed my way to The Body Shop for makeup.

Afterwards, I checked my reflection in every shop window I passed, amazed at how a new hairstyle and makeup could make me feel like a totally different person.

To get Germ's look: Even out your skin tone with Ultra Smooth Face Base in 08 (P895). For the eyes, apply Eye Colour 27 Clover Pink (P396) all over your lid, followed by 06 Earth Brown on the creases. Next, apply brush in 03 Tea Rose (P500) with a big brush for a soft effect, then follow with a swipe of lipstick in 11 Plum (P396). Comb in Brazil Nut conditioning cream (P450) before curling your hair to avoid frizz.

Please make me over!

By Kristine Chung, 22

I CAN style clothes and all, but when it comes to hair and makeup, I'm as clueless as you can get. So, for 2bU!, off to a makeover I went with no idea how things would turn out.

After taking my mug shot, er, "before" shot, Fred, the hair guru, straightened my slightly wavy hair before cutting it in long, textured layers. I thought I would have to iron my hair every day to maintain my new look, but I was wrong. The week after the makeover, everyone I knew was still raving about how good my hair looked.

At The Body Shop, the makeup artist decided that pink would look good on me for daytime makeup. She was right!

To get Kristine's look: After evening-out your skin with foundation and loose powder, apply Eye Shimmer in 01 Silver and Eye Colour 37 Pink Champagne (both P495) all over your lids. Keep the rest of your look simple with brow gel (P360) and a dab of tint (P295) on your lips and cheeks. To give your hair a similarly edgy look, try the Green Tea Fixing Gel (P295) for a bit of shine and shape.

GLAM GIRLS. Melissa's lips get an extra dose of shine while Zee's locks are trimmed.

Magical makeover

By Melissa Telan, 21

I WAS told I would be sporting the "flirty" look for this makeover. I was glad, although I had no idea what "flirty" looked like.

I told Fred, the hairstylist, that I wanted my hair to look thicker and more luscious. Without another word, he started to work his magic. When I looked up from my reading sometime later, I had curled locks. I loved it!

At the Body Shop, I was a bit worried when the makeup artist started applying gray eye shadow on my eyelids, but when he was finished, I had to admit it complemented my eye color.

To get Mel's flirty look: If you have combination skin like hers, apply Oil-Free Face Base (P636) and dust it with pressed powder (P695). Get slightly smoky eyes with Eye Colours in 04 Granite and 11 Mushroom (P396). A light pink blush like Cheek Colour 02 Raspberry Pink provides just a hint of color without overpowering your eyes. Finish off with a shimmery gloss; try Lip Gloss Dots 05 Bilberry Juice (P300). Before curling your hair, prep with Ambika Leave-In Conditioner to minimize damage.

Fusing Japan's old and new

By Cheryl Tiu
2BUL Correspondent

JAPAN has always been an invigorating fusion of old and new, as its unique culture and enduring religious ideals combine charmingly with its enthusiastic embrace of the modern world.

Its bustling and futuristic cities contrast strikingly with its scenic landscapes and pagoda temples. Kimonos are still worn, the Noh and Kabuki theaters are thriving, while ordinary Japanese are also decked out in sky-high platform shoes and hair colors of bolder hues.

If this mélange of traditional and contemporary were to be encompassed by one musical instrument, it would be the Tsugaru shamisen. The shamisen is a 3-ft long, three-stringed instrument, closely resembling the banjo. It's often touted as the "Japanese guitar" and is played with a large pick called bachi.

It has evolved from being a contraption that accompanied folk singers in the 18th and 19th centuries to an instrument that has had significant impact in Japanese classical music and world music in general.

Tsugaru, a region of the Aomori Prefecture on the northern tip of Honshu, is characterized by harsh winters and heavy snowfall. Taking a cue from the blind musicians in the 1800s who visited and sang in farms and houses for food, the nomads of Tsugaru developed their own style for playing the shamisen at the time when written music was still non-existent.

Strong sense of playing

The Tsugaru shamisen today is traditionally louder, utilized for a stronger sense of playing mostly in festivals and larger performances.

When first heard, it automatically conjures images of historical Japan with its bluesy, stringy sound. But some of the country's modern-day musicians have tried the instrument and reinvented its sound.

Enter Nitta Oyako, the father-and-son duo of Hiroshi and Masahiro Nitta from the town of Sapporo, Japan. Hiroshi decided to become a professional shamisen player when he was in high school, and has been honing his talent for the last 35 years.

Aside from having received numerous awards and appearing in several Japanese television programs, Hiroshi has also founded a shamisen association (Kougen-ryu) to promote the instrument.

His son Masahiro began to take interest in the shamisen when he was in junior high school in 1998, after having witnessed his father's victory in the 1997 National Tsugaru Shamisen Competition. Within only seven months, he won the All-Japan Junior High/Senior High School Competition. He released two solo albums—"Sou" (August 2001) and "Yuki" (October 2002) prior to co-laborating with his father.

In November 2002, the duo released their first album titled "Oyako" (Parent and Child). The album featured Japanese folk

Manila concert

Nitta Oyako will be in Manila this weekend for a three-day concert titled "A Captivating Night of Tsugaru Shamisen," as part of the Japan Foundation Manila's thrust to foster an appreciation of Japanese culture among Filipinos.

The father-and-son duo will be performing with the Makiling Ensemble, a personal choice by Hiroaki Uesugi, assistant director of the Japan Foundation Manila, who saw similarities in their committed musicality and instrument-playing.

Performances will be at the Tanghalang Aurelio Tolentino (Little Theater) of the Cultural Center of the Philippines (CCP) on Oct. 23, 7:30 p.m. (invitational) and Oct. 24, 3 p.m. (free admission), as well as on Oct. 25, 7 p.m. at the Mandarin Oriental Manila's Captain's Bar (P1,100 net, inclusive of Japanese buffet).

BEAUTY has a spectacular price. For our 2bUI makeover, we started getting our hair done at around noon, makeup was at 2 p.m., and we finished everything by 6 p.m. It had me wondering—was it all worth it?

Well, that night, my friends couldn't help but marvel at how I looked! It was fulfilling that, yes, with a few strokes of makeup magic and nicely ironed hair, I could look like a celebrity—even for a few hours.

To get Vanessa's sophisticated eyes, smoothen out your complexion with foundation and powder, then apply Eye Colour 17 Sky Blue (P396) on the lid and Eye Shimmer 09 Soft Black (P495) on the creases, then blend carefully to avoid the black-eyed look. Choose a neutral cheek color, such as 10 Sweet Nutmeg (P500), and swipe on a natural lip color like 06 Clover Pink (P500). A bit of Beeswax Texturising Wax (P350) will help prevent flyaways if you have short hair like hers.

Banishing the hair

By Saleema Devi Refran, 20

WHEN I stepped into college, I made a vow to myself to have long hair. I had always had short hair (okay, except for this time in Grade 6 when I looked like a hag). But I think I overdid it. I thought my hair wasn't long enough.

So there, the moment I stepped into the salon, Fred was shocked. Yes, I haven't had a cut in a year! He thinned out my hair and chopped it to a much shorter length. Afterwards, he handed me a ball. A hairball. My hairball, and it was huge!

Without a mirror in front of me, I trusted makeup artist Marge to transform me. I was pleasantly surprised with the Beyoncé-like look she gave me.

Thanks to Fred and Marge's magic, I was a hag no more.

Like Sam's look? Try Bronze It foundation (P455), followed by loose powder. Then smear Eye Colour 05 Burnished Brown on the lids and Eye Shimmer in 02 Gold (both P495) on the lids. A bit of Brush on Bronze (P850) on the cheeks helps highlight your cheekbones while Lip Shimmer Gold (P367) gives a sheer coat of color without making you look like a bronze statue. If you have frizzy hair, a little Grapeseed Glossing Serum (P395) after ironing your hair can work wonders.

Makeover

By Zee Castro, 21

GETTING a free 2bUI makeover was a chance for me to try something new. See, my hair has a mind of its own. It can be wavy, curly, dead flat or unruly any day, that's why I always wear it as a ponytail.

Snip, snip, snip, and there went my tresses. The result was a stylish, sassy look! Then, in the good hands of Argie, Body Shop's in-house makeup artist, my usually plain face got a welcome hint of color. Hello, gorgeous!

Zee's look is focused on her cheeks—after applying foundation (try All in One Face Base, P895), dab the Lip and Cheek Stain (P295) in tiny dots and blend well. Tone down the eyes with neutral colors such as Eye Colour 28 Soft Mauve and 05 Burnished Brown (P396) and wear a soft, natural, glossy shade—Lip Colour 04 Sheer Pink is shown here. Comb in a little Blueberry Leave-In Detangler so show off your waves (and not tangles).

Better than before

By Bianca Consunji, 20

SOME time ago, I was made over for a magazine—I was pretty excited about it, and enjoyed having my hair and makeup done for free. But the results were less than spectacular—I looked better in my "before" photo!

Undaunted, I jumped at the chance to be made over with six other 2bUI correspondents.

Predictably, the hairstylists made a fuss over my extra-long hair. After some discussion, we agreed on a slightly layered hairstyle, set with soft curls, which I had always wanted but couldn't seem to get. Three hours later, I had a cloud of curls on my head—a miracle!

Afterwards, I asked for green eyeshadow and bright pink blush; you know, the kind of makeup that'll make you look back 10 years afterward and smack your forehead, saying, "What was I thinking?"

Despite the trendy look, however, I enjoyed it. And this time, I can honestly say that I looked better in my "after" photo.

To get Bianca's look, mix Moisture Face Base (P636) with Glow Enhancer (P476) to get a dewy complexion. Then, apply Eye Colour 03 Golden Moss (P396) all over the lid, then line eyes with Eye Shimmer 08 Emerald. Follow with lip and cheek stain, then fill in your lips with Lip Colour 14 Pink Ginger (P396). To give volume and longevity to curls, rub in some Wheat Protein Volumising Mousse (P450).

20 big hearts

By Pam Pastor

IT'S time to put the spotlight on big hearts and generous souls. For weeks, we asked readers to nominate college students who they think deserve to be named Best Student Volunteer.

We were on the lookout for individuals who have done what they could to make the world a better place, young people who have been pledging their hours to good causes, devoted students who are dedicated to service.

Entries poured in from different parts of the country. We were amazed, we were impressed, we were inspired.

It was a tough job but we were able to trim down the finalists to 20.

Oct. 24, Sunday, will be a special day for these finalists. They will be walking down the ramp at a fashion show directed by Ariel Lozada at VIP: Volunteer In Person. This whole-day affair at the NBC Tent celebrates the third anniversary of Hands On Manila.

The three best volunteers will be anounced at this event. They will receive plaques and exciting prizes.

This event, which is sponsored by BON, Inc., Bench/Bench, Kiddieparty.com, will be a fun full-day celebration of the selfless act of volunteerism.

Celebrate the day with us. Join the special auction (you bid volunteer hours) and win exciting prizes (there are prizes for individuals and groups of five), play games and meet new people.

"Don't ever question the value of volunteers. Noah's Ark was built by volunteers; the Titanic was built by professionals."—Dave Gynn

All nominees will receive gift bags. Nominees and finalists may call Maricar Abus at 8978808.

There will be a Hands On Manila orientation on VIP day at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Valerie Garde, 19

AB-BSE major in Social Sciences, University of Santo Tomas

VOLUNTEERISM experience: I volunteered for the Parish Pastoral Council for Responsible Voting during the May 2001 elections. Last December 2001, I also worked as a caregiver at Don Bosco Makati for the International Day for the Handicapped. My sister and I teach Math, English and Catechism in Tatalon Sto. Domingo every Saturday for Acquired Ready Assistance Learning (Aral) which aims to assist kids in public school. I am a regular volunteer every Wednesday and Friday at the Kythe Foundation.

I am most passionate about... taking care of children and making their life a better place to live in by teaching them or by making them happy.

I should be chosen as Best Student Volunteer because... I am not here to compete or be glorified for the things that I have done but instead I want to share my stories to all the people, especially the youth to set an example that we all can make a difference in other people's lives.

Jasmine Marie Elaine A. Duran, 17

AB Literature, Ateneo De Manila University

VOLUNTEERISM experience: At the age of 3, I started to work as a volunteer for the Mumundang Anghel ng Panginoon Foundation Inc., BF Homes Parañaque City, together with my parents. I was assigned to teach little children of my age group how to sing simple songs to Jesus and Mama Mary. I participated in all the medical missions that my parents organized. I also continued to be with the little angels of BF Homes. This orientation with the street children helped me a lot during the Festival with Mission Families held in 2002. In my third year of high school at San Beda Alabang, I organized the Interact Club of St. Benedict College, the youth arm of the Rotary Club of Parañaque Lakambini. Where there were calamities like fire or flood, I was there to help out in every little way I could. I also experienced reaching out to the medium-security inmates of the New Bilibid Prisons in Muntinlupa City. I volunteered to help and organize several activities for the Down's Syndrome Association of the Philippines, Inc. including the "Buddy 2 sa 22." Last summer, I joined the medical mission of the Christ Youth in Action in Infanta, Quezon. I also joined Ateneo's Aley ni Ignacio.

I am most passionate about... the alleviation of poverty by raising the standard of education.

Adrian Carlo Velasco, 21

Bachelor of Arts in Psychology, De La Salle University-Manila

VOLUNTEERISM experience: In high school, my first experiences were engagements in a special children's center and the New Bilibid Prison. In college, my exposure toward marginalized sectors increased through the guidance of the Center for Social Concern and Action (Cosca). This center concentrates on advocates in various Pilipino communities. I have rendered my services in activities for urban poor families in Metro Manila, street children and families, special children, the Aetas in Bataan and drug rehab patients in Bulacan. Today, we are establishing a new organization for the youth, Sigaw Org. This will be an essential tool in elevating human consciousness and in promoting the talents of young people.

I am most passionate about... the intellectualization of all Filipinos, most especially the youth, as the best way to regain our moral compass.

I should be chosen as Best Student Volunteer because... of my work to uplift Filipinos' social consciousness. This recognition will gain awareness for my advocacy.

Lou Sabrina S. Ongkiko, 19BS Biology, Ateneo de Manila University (nominated by her father Herman Ongkiko)VOLUNTEERISM experience.

I am an active member in the Alay ni Ignacio (ANI) program of the Ateneo De Manila University, a summer instructional program that teaches and organizes school activities for public high-school students. I am now the assistant principal for Volunteer Formation, responsible for the preparation and formation of ANI volunteers from the Ateneo. I have also joined the Special Olympics, a sports-oriented program for the mentally handicapped. I help organize and train special kids in athletics, fun runs and in other sports activities. During school breaks, I volunteer as a member of the teen missionaries under the Youth for the Third Millennium. And for my debut, I opted to make a play for poor kids to celebrate my 18th birthday. It was titled "Ang Bata at ang Irao." The moral of the play is for children to fight for their dreams and to keep on running for a better future.

the education of the youth—not just in academics but also in the education of their hearts. Volunteerism is an opportunity for me to share the love that I have in my heart.

I should be chosen as Best Student Volunteer because... I saw how volunteerism made my life richer. My passion for volunteerism is relentless, and I will continue to be involved in activities that would touch as many lives as possible.

Ryan Anthony Bestre, 20Bachelor of Science in Environmental Science, Benguet State University (nominated by Ilana Basitan)

HE has been a regular volunteer of Pine Tree, a non-government organization established by Michael Bengwayan, also an environmentalist. Located in La Trinidad, Benguet, the organization responds to the needs of the community and students regarding research in environment and conservation. He and other Pine Tree volunteers have conducted cleanups around Balib River and initiated tree-planting in different areas of La Trinidad.

He has also influenced some members of the Mountain Collegian, official student publication of Baguio State University of which he is associate editor to participate in Pine Tree activities. Despite a hectic schedule, he is a volunteer youth bible study teacher of his church, Midtown Church of Christ.

He is most passionate about... the environment. He always wanted to study Environmental Science, being so passionate about caring for the environment and nurturing it for the future.

He should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because... he is a consistent honor student, president of the Young Environmentalists Society, editor in chief of Kali-Casan (official student publication of the College of Arts and Sciences), outstanding writer, good citizen, action man, God-fearing, optimist

Mark Dean del Rosario Itaraide, 19Bachelor of Arts Major in Political Science,

VOLUNTEERISM experience: I participated in Pista'y and Kagueban, a yearly tree planting program of the City Government of Puerto Princesa. In 1998, I became involved with Far Eastern University's Young Volunteers of Today (now Tamaraw Volunteers or Tamvol) which will be assisting in the Medical Mission to be conducted by ABS-CBN Sunday TV Mass workforce. I participated in the projects for Home of Joy orphanage and Hands on Manila-affiliated Organizations, Museo Pambata and Habitat for Humanity. At that time, I was the public relations officer of the organization. Now, being president of the Tamaraw Volunteers, I led my coworkers in the activities such as the Christmas party we had with Concordia Children's Services, volunteered at the water station for the GMA Fun Run 2004, "Tulong sa Baseco," house building for Gawad Kalinga and the recent 19th Coastal Cleanup. We are now in the process of preparing a proposal on implementing solid waste management in FEU and tying up with the FEU-Institute of Arts and Sciences Student Council for a program "FEU Tamaraws Care for the Tamaraws," primarily having the goal of helping the preservation of the Tamaraws in Mindoro. I am also one of the appointed coordinators of the United Nations Children's Fund. I am also the Youth for Christ FEU Socio-Political/Gawad Kalinga head.

I am most passionate about... children. I really like interacting with them.

His leadership [abilities] were [further] tested when he moved to college. He is a good leader. Even as a neophyte, [when he was] elected class president, he served as a liaison between his classmates and their instructors.

Lorraine Marie S. Item, 19

Public Health, University of the Philippines-Manila

VOLUNTEERISM experience:

I started with the program for the street children of the Ugnayan ng Pahinungod-Manila, a volunteer program of the University of the Philippines. We visit an institution for street children weekly to teach them artistic skills. Since I intend to pursue medicine after graduation, I also became an emergency-room volunteer, also under Pahinungod. After a year, I joined their Summer Immersion Service Program, a three-week immersion in rural communities. I was assigned together with two other volunteers in Maipalon, Mindoro Occidental where the assimilated Mangyan are. We assisted in the on-going programs implemented in the community. I just started joining their Cupfeeding Program and Hospice Care Program. As a Public Health student, I also join the medical missions conducted by our college. I am also involved in the Gawad Kalinga project of Couples for Christ being a Youth for Christ member. During the first half of this year's first semester I served as a facilitator and volunteer in an NSTP class. Every week, we went to Baseco, Tondo to help build houses.

I am most passionate about... poverty. Like what a friend once said, if our poor brothers also have the same opportunities as we do, they may even do better than us.

I should be chosen as Best Student Volunteer because... I don't just volunteer, I serve. I am not only a student but a real Filipino who considers the welfare of her country in the plans and dreams she pursues.

BS Computer Science, Pamantasan ng Lungsod ng Pasig (nominated by Leovely Linan)

VOLUNTEERISM experience: I hold three student organizations in the university: founder and director-general of Unesco Youth PLPasig which advocates peace and youth empowerment; convenor of Amnesty International PLPasig which works for human rights and international solidarity; and vice-president of Leo Club International which addresses civic issues and humanitarian programs. One time, as part of Lions Club International (mother organization of Leo Club) project, I was one of the volunteers for the Feeding Program of urban-poor children held at Pasig Cathedral. November last year, a fellow student leader and I hosted a tripartite dialogue with Burmese (Myanmar) refugees and Amnesty International.

I should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because... the award in general would give me a deeper experience on how it feels to be recognized as a volunteer. The award will pose a continuous challenge for me. Recognition come and go but the impact of sharing one's life to other people in any part of the world will surely stay.

gathered some 20,000 youth and multi-sector groups in denouncing drug abuse. I conceptualized the text program for the President of the Philippines and proposed the opening of the 117 line for text reports on drug abuse. I have also helped organize the Philippines' Human Rights Celebration. I have traveled to Malaysia as the Official Philippine Delegate to the International Conference on Drugs and Young People, and was the Official Philippine Delegate to Singapore in the "Lakbay Aral Program."

I am most passionate about... human rights and youth Empowerment.

I should be chosen as Best Student Volunteer because... I have dedicated my life to serving the youth and trying to make a difference, at the same time having good grades in school. I empower the youth by getting them aware of their rights and their role in nation-building and international understanding.

Victa Joanna M. Garde, 20Bachelor of Arts/ Bachelor of Science Major in Social Sciences, University of Santo TomasVOLUNTEERISM experience:

The first major volunteer job I got involved in was when I joined the Parish Pastoral Council for Responsible Voting (PPCRV). I decided to be a poll-watcher in 2001. Another project that I got involved on a national level was when I volunteered to be a marshal in 2003 at the World Meeting of Families held in Luneta. My job was to assist local and foreign visitors in having a safe and comfortable time during the main event which was held in Luneta.

I also volunteered to take care of handicapped children in Don Bosco Makati during the celebration of the International Day of the Handicapped in December 2003, and became a volunteer of Habitat for Humanity, twice.

During my vacant time, I go to the charity ward of UST Hospital, children's section. I am also a volunteer of Kythe, a group that comforts terminally ill children and their families.

In school, aside from having a double major, I am also the president of UST Social Sciences, as well as a member of a group called Ara. I teach kids from public schools Math, Science, English and Catechism on Saturdays.

JOANNA helping build a house

I am most passionate about... education. It is the main tool for the transformation of our society.

I should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because... I would not be honest if I say that I don't want to win this contest. Anyone who takes time out from their hectic college schedule just to be able to lighten up the load or ease the burden of their neighbors deserves to be honored. I believe that being chosen as one of the top 20 college volunteers here in the Philippines is an honor.

Winning this would make me the happiest person. I joined this contest in the hope that I could inspire or encourage all the people out there especially students to help in every way they can to make the lives of the people around them a little better.

Arden Cecilia Gonzales, 20Bachelor in Secondary Education major in SPED, University of the Philippines-DilimanVOLUNTEERISM experience:

Arden Gonzales is the present vice president for External Affairs of the University of the Philippines Sandigan. As External Affairs VP, she takes charge of the organization's external activities which include institution visits and public high-school tutorials. She also coordinates with the organization's scholars.

Arden also headed UP Sandigan's coordination with Habitat for Humanity in its house-building project in Amadeo, Cavite last June.

Arden is also a volunteer siter in Cribs (Creating Responsive Infants By Sharing, Round), since 2003. She was also one of the organization's volunteers who visit institutions.

Like Golden Acres, Bethany Girls' Home, He Cares Foundation, Children of Joy Foundation, Tahanan Santa Luisa and House of Refuge. Last September, Arden was a speaker in the UP Sandigan's Alternative Classroom Learning Experience on "Tutoring Tutors," a discussion on teaching techniques and passion of volunteer tutoring. She's a volunteer tutor for slow-learners at Krus na Ligas High School.

She is most passionate about... socio-civic causes.

She should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because... nobody can measure up with her contributions as volunteer in a number of social service projects she has worked with and organized.

I FIND fulfillment in my volunteer work. It is nice to go home knowing you have done something that day; that you have touched people's lives. My past volunteer experiences include: house building for Habitat for Humanity as a member of the UP Pahinungod, medical mission and gift giving as a member of the ABS-CBN Foundation Volunteer, gift giving and story telling to kids as a member of the UP Praxis and Volunteer for Clean Air Youth Forum-Center for Environmental Awareness and Education.

Currently, I am an active volunteer of the Young Professionals' Network for Earth Friendly Action (YPNET), an urban-based environmental advocacy volunteer group. Our projects include Lungs Barangayan: Tayo nang Mag-segregate. Volunteers go to a barangay and clean the streets and estero. A talk on waste segregation follows. Residents can also donate or sell their recyclables.

I am now organizing two volunteer groups: Students' Alliance for the Environment (SAFE-Philippines) and the GreenMinds Interactive. SAFE-Philippines aims to organize and get students and student organizations involved in environmental issues while GreenMinds hopes to provide access and use of technology by giving free web design services to non-profit organizations, especially environmental non-government organizations.

I am most passionate about... the environment.

I should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because... Volunteering, especially in more than one organization, requires a considerable amount of time. However, although I have to work now to support myself and my studies, I make sure that I have enough time for volunteerism.

I believe I should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because I may be able to inspire others—let them know that no matter how busy they are, with dedication and commitment, (they can still get involved in) worthy causes.

I'M THE SANGGUNTANG Katabaan chair of our barangay. Since high school, I engaged in, spearheaded and enjoyed different organizational activities (as) a leader or a member.

At present, I'm in a number of university and community organizations. From numerous volunteer experiences, two I think were the best experiences—as a Namfrel volunteer and Tzu Ch. Foundation Volunteer.

My clinical instructor selected five volunteers, including myself, for a medical mission in a deprived upland barangay. It was a fulfilling experience. It was not just about applying the skills, knowledge and attitude acquired from the academe but a real life-changing experience that inspired life-long dedication to serve humanity.

I am most passionate about... social awareness.

I should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because... I have a big heart and want to serve people and correct their erroneous way of life. I'm a dedicated and committed follower and leader in my school and community. I am not a good writer. Neither can I dance or sing but I can serve. I don't talk much but I do a lot. I am true to others and myself. I want to be an example of our present generation. It is not how big or small my contribution is, it is the willingness to

I improved the Balik-Laya concept by also including economic (i.e. selling their products), recreational, and medical aid especially to children in conflict with the law in the Medium Security Compound of the National Bilibid Prisons, and by strengthening the tie-up with the Philippine Jesuit Prison Service and Integrated Bar of the Philippines.

Our project was named Most Outstanding Project in the Ateneo VP's Awards for Service and Excellence. It was also first place in the Responsible Citizenship Fair organized by the University of Asia and the Pacific, and sponsored by the Institute for Solidarity in Asia, National Youth Commission, and World Bank Institute.

This year, I started the Bill-making contest, which advocates responsible youth citizenship and good governance.

I should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer because... I make seemingly impossible projects possible.

Some of our leaders weren't able to push beyond their limits (they needed more willpower, more determination, more foresight) to turn these pioneer youth projects into reality.

I was given the power as an officer, and I (decided) to be of a different mold, to not be a traditional leader, to think outside the box, and do what I'm supposed to do. If I let myself be discouraged by (pessimists), our projects wouldn't have been possible. No one else could have done them. I knew I could do them, so I volunteered, led my fellow officers and youth to set up and improve the foundation of projects that are bigger than life.

Outstanding bunch

By Cheryl Tiu
2bU! Correspondent

OPEN to all private and public graduating university students, the 10 Outstanding Students of the Philippines (TOSP) is a nationwide search for young people who excel not just academically but also exhibit good community involvement and social responsibility anchored on nation-building.

The annual project of RPM Foundation Inc. in cooperation with the Rotary Club of Makati Central, the Commission on Higher Education and National Bookstore, has counted among its previous awardees former Education Secretary Raul Roco, lawyer-broadcaster-TV host Ricardo Puno Jr. and Maram College president Patricia Licuanan, to name a few.

This year's 30 finalists emerged from 357 nominees and were announced recently at a welcome dinner at the Richmonde Hotel. It was also an occasion for the finalists to meet each other for the first time. The awarding ceremony, in which 10 winners will be announced (each one of them receiving a P20,000 cash prize), will be held at Malacañang Palace this Friday, October 22.

TOSP is not merely an award, though. It is a vision- and values-based program. "What makes us different from other awards is our alumni formation," TOSP coordinator Flor de Guzman explains. "It's a formation process where we humanize the achiever, handle challenges of the community and work for our future together as a TOSP community."

The alumni are asked to contribute to nation-building activities spearheaded by the foundation.

1998 TOSP awardee Pamela Asis says, "When I received my trophy, I said to myself, 'This is now the start of your commitment to nation-building. Being a TOSP awardee is a testament of what this country can be. I have to work with other people toward 'community-building efforts."

Asis and the other TOSP alumni serve as mentors to the finalists, and they also run the formation process based on the triangular framework that TOSP is built on: academic and professional excellence, leadership and social responsibility.

TOSP's mantra is "Learning, leading and serving for life." This is the goal student awardees have to commit themselves to once they join the distinguished roster of TOSP alumni.

Mikhail Jurell G. De Vera, 20

BS in Business Administration, Major in Human Resource Management, De La Salle-College of Saint Benilde

VOLUNTEERISM experience: 2001-2003

—Student Volunteer, Social Action Office De La Salle-Zobel; involved in two medical missions in Laguna and was a volunteer facilitator for Kamp-Tugon, an environmental awareness camp for children from our partner center. From 2003-present—Student Volunteer, Social Action Office De La Salle-College of Saint Benilde. I became a Science teacher, Science chair and principal for the Innovative Education Program. I was the head of the documentation committee of Alay sa Bata 2003. I was head of logistics for DMT Medical Mission. I was a participant for the International Coastal Cleanup, DMT Mass Casualty Incident and Summer of Service 2004.

The cause that I am most passionate about is... education. I believe that education is the key to the progress of our society.

I should be chosen as the Best Student Volunteer... so that the social action volunteers will finally be able to have an identity and stand out. The sad reality is that our organization is but a shadow in our campus. Few people know about its existence and our programs and services. If I will be chosen, my fellow Benildeans will finally be able to recognize our organization so that they too may be able to exercise the Benildeans Core Value of being socially responsible.

Mannos
with Beatles

IT'S back to memory lane tonight starting at 9 p.m. at the Music Museum as Awit Awards winner Nyoy Volante and Mannos perform in a repeat of their successful show "NV & M Salute the Beatles."

Notamannos Productions brings back the show featuring the music of John Lennon, George Harrison, Ringo Starr and Paul McCartney.

Listen to classic Beatles tunes like "Here Comes the Sun," "Hey Jude," "Drive My Car," "With a Little Help From My Friends" and "Yesterday."

performed by Nyoy together with Co-cyo Aranas on bass guitar, Glenn Dalit on k-jon, Jerome Nunez on violin and Maynard Albis on bongos.

Presented by Globe Telecom, "NV & M Salute the Beatles" is sponsored by Levi's, Kit Kat, Nestlé Ice Cream, Hanford Phils., Pateco and Manila Bulletin. Direction is by Ernie Duque.

Proceeds of the show will benefit the depressed children of Guimaras Island.

'Evolution' needs cleaner final print, reviewer warns

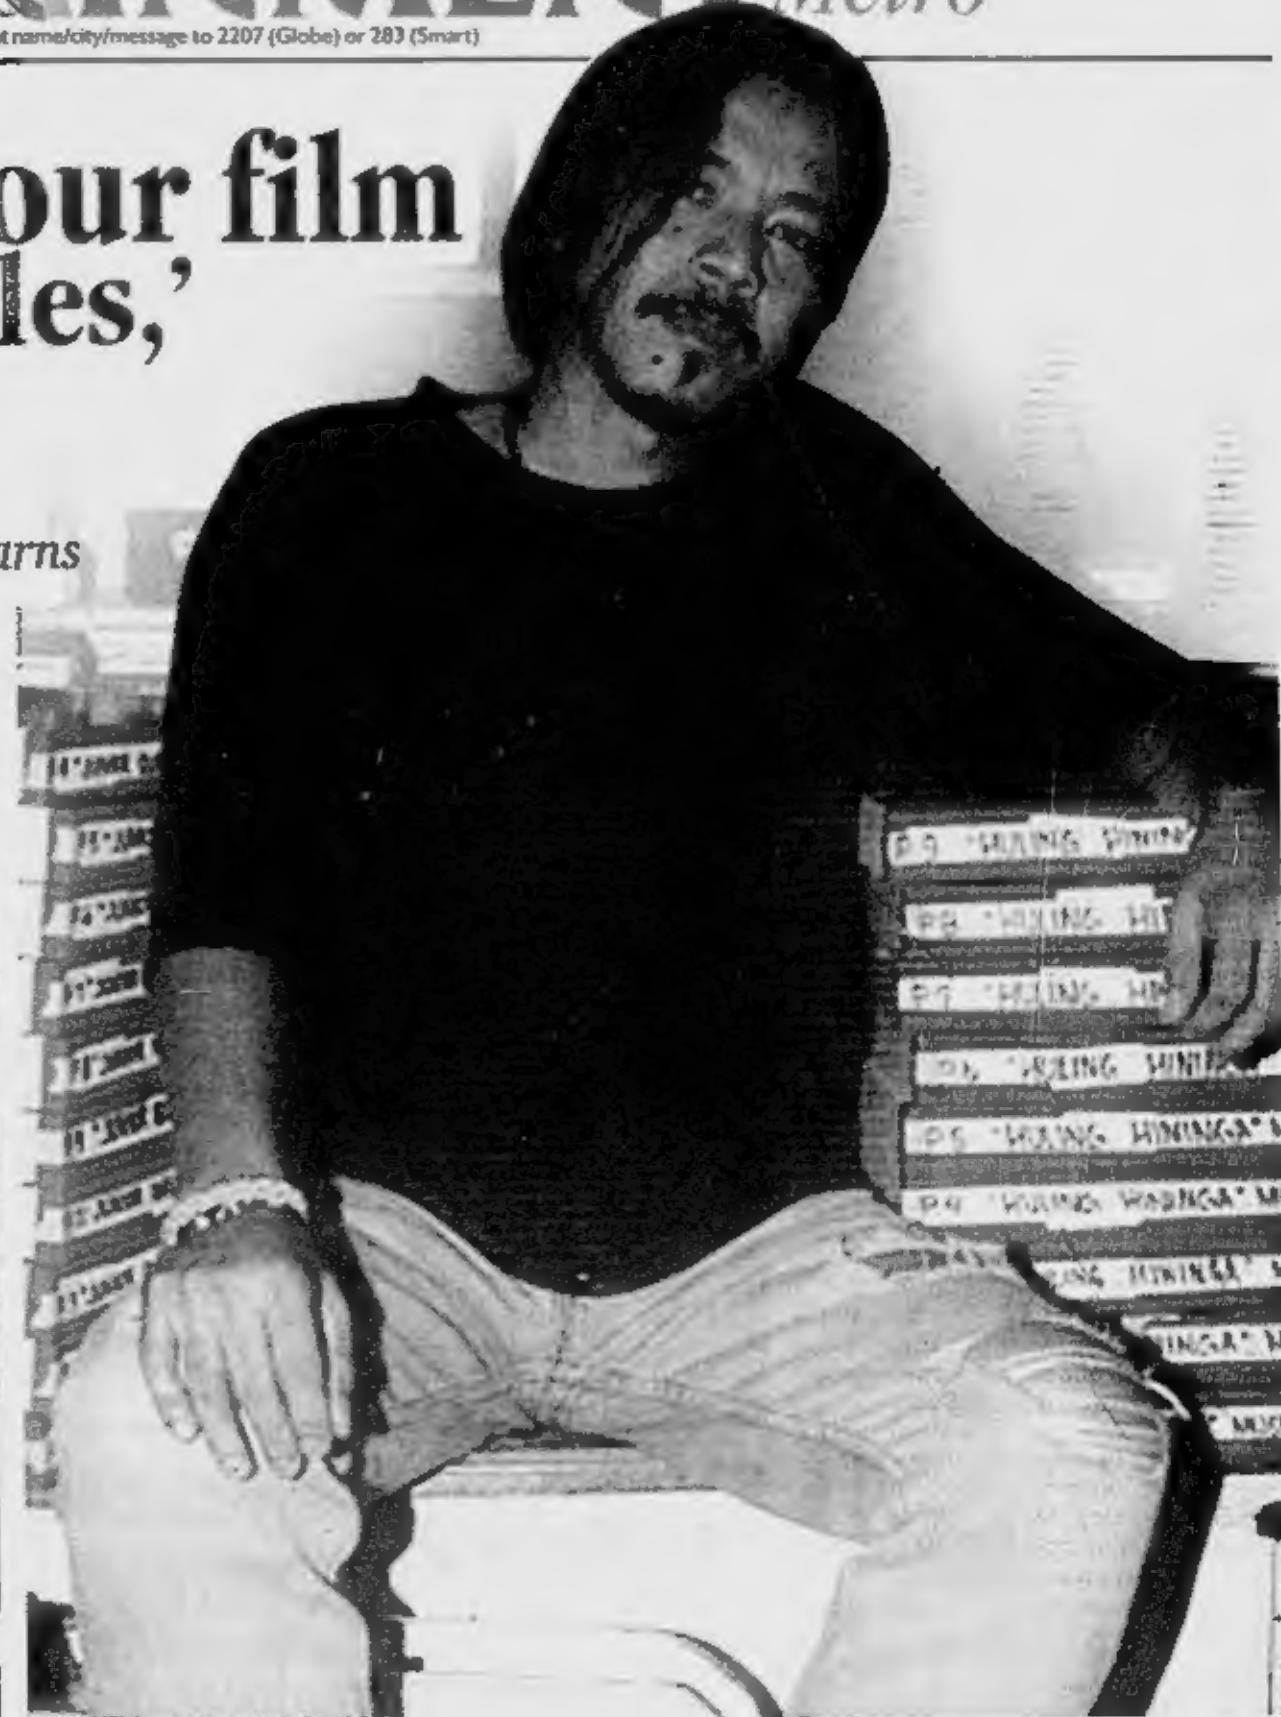

A FILIPINO movie that runs for 10 hours caught the attention of critics after its recent screening at the Toronto Film Festival—enough to land a lengthy, detailed review in Variety magazine, considered the bible of the entertainment industry worldwide.

"Evolution of a Filipino Family" by Lay Diaz was cited for its "uncompromising and austere seriousness" and "starkly modern devices."
